INTRODUCTION.

THE present Catalogue has been prepared in accordance with a resolution of the Board of Governors of Dulwich College. It consists of two parts. In the first are described the manuscript volumes<sup>1</sup> in the College Library, none of which were included in the recently-published catalogue of the printed books; in the second, all the documents in the Muniment Room bearing an earlier date than the death of the Founder as well as a few others of particular interest selected from those of a later period.

Several of the Manuscripts and the whole of the Muniments except nos. 65-72 belonged to Edward Alleyn, the actor, Founder of the College. The volumes numbered MSS. i.-vi. and xviii. are made up of letters and separate papers of all kinds, and their united contents are known as the 'Alleyn Papers.' Under this general term they include not only all that remains of Alleyn's own correspondence, but also that of his wife's stepfather, Philip Henslowe, which presumably came into his hands at the death of the latter in 1616. Apart from their value as materials for the Founder's biography, the extraordinary interest they possess in relation to the early history of the English drama and stage has long been recognised. In order that this special feature may be seen to advantage, everything which serves to illustrate it has accordingly been brought together in MS. i. In like manner MS. ii. contains the whole of the papers connected with the sports of the Bear Garden. The other volumes which certainly belonged to Edward Alleyn are numbered MSS. vii.-xi. They comprise the invaluable theatrical Diary of Philip Henslowe, a Memorandum-Book and a Diary of Alleyn himself, the Register of Dulwich College from its foundation, and a List of offices held under the Crown. Besides these, it is probable from their nature that MSS. xix. and xx. also formed part of the Founder's collection. The contents of the rest of the MSS. need not be here particularised. How and when some of them came to the College it is impossible to say; but several appear to have belonged at one time to the family of Hatton. With regard to the Muniments, these have been numbered from 1 to 594 in a consecutive series; but, for more convenient reference, they have also been divided into sections according to subject. Thus nos. 1-72, dated 1546-1662, relate exclusively to the Theatre and the Bear Garden; nos. 73-184, dated 1537-1626, to Bishopsgate, Southwark, Kennington, &c.; and nos. 185-594, dated 1323-1626, to Dulwich alone, including all the deeds connected with the foundation of the College. A fourth and last section is composed of a series of Court-Rolls of Dulwich manor. These are numbered independently from A to M, and extend in date, with several breaks in continuity, from 1333 to 1626.

The history of Alleyn's collection since his death in 1626 may be briefly told. The safe custody of the 'evidences' of the College was made the subject of special provision in the statutes, and they were no doubt deposited in the Treasure Chamber as a matter of course. But, with regard to the mass of private papers unconnected with the College and of no legal value, such precautions were not necessary, and there is no reason to believe that their preservation was directly due either to a deliberate intention on the Founder's own part or to reverence entertained for his memory by others. Whether they were from the first mixed up indiscriminately with the Muniments or remained, at Alleyn's death, in that part of the College buildings which he occupied, and which passed to successive holders of the office of Master, is altogether uncertain; but the whole extent of the care bestowed upon them by the College authorities for more than a century seems to have consisted in leaving them alone. The natural consequences of this neglect are everywhere seen in the marks which they bear of damp and decay, and there can hardly be a doubt that a large number of papers must have perished altogether.<sup>1</sup>

The first intimation that such relics existed is to be found in the Biographia Britannica, published in 1747. An earlier reference might have been looked for in John Aubrey's account of Dulwich College, printed after his death in the Natural History and Antiquities of Surrey, 1719 (below, p. 202); but, although the library and pictures are noticed, no mention is there made of any papers or other MSS. which had belonged to the Founder. William Oldys, <sup>1</sup> The fate of some may be inferred from that of Norden's print of London, mentioned by Aubrey. To quote from Rich. Gough: 'Norden published also a view of London in eight sheets, having at bottom a representation of the Lord Mayor's shew, all on horseback, and the aldermen in round caps. Bagford says this view is singular, and was taken from the pitch of the hill towards Dulwich college going to Camberwell from London, about 1604 or 1606, and that he had not met with any other of the kind: he adds that he saw it on the staircase at Dulwich college, and that Secretary Pepys went afterwards to see it, and would have purchased it: but that since it is quite decayed and destroyed by the damp of the wall' (British Topography, 1780, vol. i. p. 747). The actual fall of the porch and Treasure Chamber in 1703 (p. 197) shows the lamentable state to which the fabric of the College had been reduced.

who wrote the life of Edw. Alleyn in the Biographia, was more inquisitive or more fortunate and drew from this source the greater part of his materials. His information was not obtained directly from the originals, but from the Master of the College and, more especially, from a letter addressed to him in 1745 by a 'learned and ingenious member.' To this letter he constantly refers, and its writer, the Rev. Tho. Waterhouse, who had been appointed usher as recently as 1744, deserves the credit of being the first Fellow on the Dulwich foundation who showed an appreciative interest in its manuscript treasures. At the same time, the particulars published related almost exclusively to Alleyn's own personal history, and it is evident, both from omissions and errors, that a large portion of the collection was still undiscovered or had been very superficially examined. The volume of which most use was made was Alleyn's Diary for 1617–1622, now MS. ix., and it is worth notice that this is expressly said to be the only one of its kind then extant.<sup>1</sup> Although it is probable enough that similar Diaries, after, if not before, the above period, had been left by Alleyn, the statement is so far satisfactory that it relieves the College in modern times from the suspicion of having allowed them to perish. Of Philip Henslowe Oldys knew so little that he wrote his name as Hinchtoe, and of his Diary he appears to have been wholly ignorant. Nearly forty years more, in fact, elapsed before this unique and most remarkable record of Elizabethan stage management was brought to light. Its discovery was announced by Edmond Malone at the end of his Historical Account of the English Stage (Shakspeare, 1790, vol. i.

<sup>1</sup> Malone, writing in 1780, says that he had enquired at the College for this Diary, but it had 'been lost within these few years' by the negligence of a former librarian (Supplement to the Edition of Shakspeare published in 1778, vol. i, p. 49). Fortunately at some time or other it was again discovered.

part ii. p. 288). To use his own words: 'Just as this work was issuing from the press, some curious manuscripts relative to the stage were found at Dulwich College, and obligingly transmitted to me from thence. One of these is a large folio volume of accounts kept by Mr. Philip Henslowe, who appears to have been proprietor of the Rose Theatre, near the Bankside, in Southwark.' Throwing, as they did, a flood of unexpected light on his subject, these new materials were of the highest importance to Malone; and, although, as he proceeds to say, it was too late to insert them in their proper places, he printed copious extracts from the Diary as an appendix, adding to them a few of the letters and papers in MS. i. and some curious theatrical inventories, the originals of which have since unfortunately disappeared. Shortly after Malone's publication, attention was again directed to the Dulwich collection by Daniel Lysons in his Environs of London, 1792, vol. i. p. 87. Though not free from errors, the account there given of Edw. Alleyn and his foundation was fuller and more accurate than any before it. This was mainly due to the facilities afforded the author for inspecting the MSS. at the College, whereby he was enabled not only to correct and supplement earlier writers, but to extract from Alleyn's Diary and other sources much interesting matter. Among the papers thus made known were some of the most important of those connected with the Bear Garden in MS. ii.; but the subject of Henslowe's Diary and the theatrical MSS. generally is passed over in silence. The reason of this is hard to understand, unless Lysons wrote, like Oldys, before they were found. This, however, could scarcely have been the case, since he refers to Malone's discovery of a note of Alleyn's marriage, by which he apparently means the entry in Henslowe's Diary quoted below, p. 6, note 1. The originals, as we know, were in the hands of Malone; but it is hardly credible that Lysons should have heard nothing about them at the College. It is, indeed, not wholly impossible that the authorities there had forgotten their existence ; at the most, they had so little idea of their value, or such unbounded confidence in Malone, that he was actually permitted, it appears, to retain possession of them down to his death in 1812 (Collier, Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 2). The greater part are said to have been then returned by the younger James Boswell, his literary executor ; but some of the papers which he published as belonging to the collection are no longer to be found in it, and how many more disappeared, of which no record remains, it is impossible to say. The inventories mentioned above and an interesting agreement by Robert Dawes as a member of Henslowe's company in 1614 (Shakspeare, 1821, vol. xxi. p. 413) have been lost altogether, and the same is the case with the stage-plot of Tamar Cam (ibid. vol. iii. p. 356). Of the three other very curious plots printed by Malone the only one still at the College is that of The Seven Deadly Sins, now MS. xix. The plots of The Dead Man's Fortune and Frederick and Basilea by some means found their way into the library of Richard Heber, and, at its sale in 1836, they were bought for the British Museum, being now numbered Additional MS. 10449. It should be added that after Malone's death transcripts were found among his papers of a number of documents, in addition to the matter which he had actually printed. These transcripts, which included the valuable series of letters addressed to Henslowe by Rob. Daborne, the dramatist, were published by Boswell in his edition of Malone's Shakspeare, 1821, vols. iii. p. 343, xxi. p. 389.

The next writer who made an independent use of the Dulwich collection was Mr. John Payne Collier. The result of his earliest personal acquaintance with it was embodied in his History of Dramatic Poetry, &c., published in 1831, up to which time he had chiefly devoted his attention to Henslowe's Diary. In 1841 he produced his Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, a volume which had the honour of being the first of the series issued by the newly-formed Shakespeare Society. Its nature has been aptly described by Mr. Joseph Hunter<sup>1</sup> as 'a sylva of Alleyneana rather than a life of Alleyn'; but, in spite of many deficiencies, it contained a large amount of new facts and documents of the highest interest and value, with regard to both Alleyn himself and some of the most famous of his literary contemporaries. One disagreeable feature, which it has in common with other works of the same author, will have to be considered further on. The Memoirs were followed in 1843 by the Alleyn Papers, a thin volume edited by Mr. Collier for the same society. Its contents consisted solely of letters and papers, a number of which, such as the Daborne correspondence, were not entirely fresh matter. In the introduction were also included extracts from Alleyn's Memorandum-Book, now MS. viii. It should be observed that some of the documents published in this volume were at the time not at Dulwich, but in the possession of Mr. J. O. Halliwell. Their nature, however, leaves no room for doubt that they originally belonged to Alleyn's collection; and at a later period Mr. Halliwell with his usual liberality restored them to the College. They are now distributed through the volumes in their proper places, but a list drawn up by Mr. Halliwell will be found at the end of MS. iii. Mr. Collier's last Dulwich publication was The Diary of Philip Henslowe, Shakespeare Society, 1845, comprising all the matter in the MS. which has anything to do with the stage. The inventories of costumes, properties, and play-books, before alluded to, were also included in an appendix ; but, the originals being lost, these were taken just as they stood from Malone's Shakspeare, 1821, vol. iii. p. 308. Mr. Collier gives as his special reason for reprinting them that they had actually formed part of the Diary and had been abstracted since Malone's time. This, however, is an error, since Malone states (op. cit. p. 296) that they were found in a bundle of loose papers.

Through the medium of the works enumerated, and more particularly those of Mr. Collier, the collection was now fully made known ;<sup>1</sup> and it need hardly be added that its custodians were at length thoroughly alive to the duty of preserving what was left of it intact. Though it could not atone for the scandalous neglect and apathy of earlier times, the care shown in this respect during the closing years of the old corporation left little to be desired. To the last two Fellows who held the office of Librarian, the Rev. John Image and the Rev. Charles Howes, Mr. Collier paid a fitting tribute in his several introductions ; and it is the more to be regretted that some unscrupulous forger should have abused the opportunities, which their liberality allowed, by the introduction of spurious matter. Since the re-constitution of Alleyn's College under the Act of Parliament of 1857 the Manuscripts, which form part of the Library, have been in the official custody of the Rev. Dr. Carver, the first Master under the new scheme. The Muniments, on the other hand, which were formerly in the Treasure-Chamber, are now deposited in the Muniment Room at the New College, where they are effectually secured from further harm. I may further mention that Dr. Carver has had the good fortune to purchase back a few of the papers lost by his less careful predecessors, among them being an interesting series of suggestions made to Alleyn for his statutes by the Warden of Winchester College (p. 145). It is to be hoped that, if similar opportunities should occur, they will not be neglected.<sup>1</sup>

But, although now jealously preserved, the collection up to the present time has never been catalogued. The letters and papers also still remained in the utmost possible confusion ; and it was necessary therefore, in the first instance, to reduce them to order. Their mutilated and fragmentary condition, and in many cases the absence of dates, made this a task of some difficulty ; but all have now been carefully repaired and bound, and the contents of the several volumes, into which they are divided, have been chronologically arranged. One result is that some papers thought to be lost, as MS. i. art. 106, prove to be safe, while, on the contrary, others which survived to so comparatively recent a date as to be printed by Mr. Collier have to be reported as now missing. The other MSS., which already formed separate volumes, were in an almost equally dilapidated state. They have therefore been re-bound uniformly with the rest, care, however, being taken to preserve the old vellum covers of MSS. vii. and ix. The original design of the Catalogue was restricted to the manuscripts in the Library ; but, on examination, their intimate connexion with the muniments made it advisable to include also a portion of the latter. All those deeds and other documents have accordingly been catalogued which were executed by Alleyn himself or in his own time, or which came to him on the acquisition of his estates. The few of a later date which have been added continue the history of the Fortune Theatre after his death till its final demolition.

The system upon which the Catalogue has been compiled is as follows :—With regard to the Alleyn Papers, every letter and paper, except in the case of a series to the same purport, has been separately described ; references have been given when an article has already been printed ; and explanatory foot-notes have been frequently subjoined. From their peculiar interest, the contents of MSS. i. and ii. claimed to be even more minutely treated. The descriptions therefore have often taken the form of a regular précis ; and, if an important article has not been published or the published text is very inaccurate, it has been printed in full. This latter course has occasionally been adopted for other reasons ; and in MSS. iii. and v. also a few articles have been dealt with in the same way. For MSS. vii.—xi., and for the rest of the MSS. not belonging to Alleyn's collection, a description in general terms, with the addition in some cases of a few extracts, has been deemed sufficient. The extracts from Alleyn's Diary are numerous. They form, however, a small portion only of the MS., in which even the most trifling payments are recorded from day to day ; and all the entries selected possess some elements of interest. A good many of them have been printed or noticed elsewhere, but it has been in a loose and disconnected way, and the annotations, which they required and which here accompany them, will, it is hoped, be regarded as an additional reason for their reproduction. In cataloguing the muniments the descriptions have been made as concise as possible, but nothing worthy of notice has intentionally been omitted. The only exception is in the case of the Court-Rolls of Dulwich manor. The extreme dates of each of these have alone been given, a few general remarks upon them being reserved for this Introduction.

But, before I enter upon other matters, it will be convenient to collect some particulars of the life of Edward Alleyn, though, at the same time, much must necessarily be left to be supplied from the Catalogue itself or from what has already been written on the subject by others. The date of his birth on 1 Sept., 1566, is accurately fixed by his own entries of its recurring anniversary in his Diary; and his baptism on the day following is recorded in the parish register of St. Botolph's, Bishopsgate. Fuller's often-quoted statement that he was born 'near Devonshire house where now is the sign of the Pie' is fully confirmed by the mention of Pye Alley and Fisher's Folly, the old name of Devonshire House, in close connexion with his father's property. In the pedigree, signed by himself, in the Visitation of Surrey in 1623,<sup>1</sup> he appears as the son of Edward Alleyn, of Willen, co. Bucks, and of Margaret Townley, daughter of John Townley, of co. Lancaster. The paternal descent is so far borne out that a pedigree in the Visitation of Bucks in 1634 (Brit. Mus., Harley MS. 1234, f. 13) makes the elder Edward Alleyn to be the second son of Thomas Alleyn, of Willen and of Mesham, co. Bedford. On the other hand, even so experienced a genealogist as Mr. Joseph Hunter failed to trace the connexion between Margaret Townley and the Townleys of Lancashire;<sup>2</sup> and there is too much reason to suspect that it rested simply on imagination. This is not the less likely from the date of the pedigree, which was drawn out just before Alleyn's marriage with Constance Donne and about the time when he is known (p. 112) to have been desirous of 'sum further dignetie,' for the attainment of which a good descent was probably of consequence.

<sup>2</sup> A John Townley, of Gray's Inn, was a tenant under Alleyn at Dulwich, but he does not address him (p. 99) as if he were a relative.

The earliest mention in the Dulwich collection of Edw. Alleyn, the father, is in a bond dated 1555 (Mun. 77). He is there styled 'of London, yeoman,' as also in 1557 (Mun. 78). In subsequent deeds, the first of which records his purchase of a house in Bishopsgate in 1566 (Mun. 80), he uniformly appears as an 'innholder,' and he is so described in his will, dated 10 Sept., 1570 (Mun. 82). The statement made by Malcolm (Londinium Redivivum, 1802, vol. i. p. 345) and noticed by Hunter as 'a very curious fact,' that in the entry of his burial at St. Botolph's, on 13 Sept., 1570, he is called 'poete to the Queene,' may be readily dismissed. On referring to the register I found the word to be 'porter'; and the title 'one of the Queen's Maiesties porters' is given him in a document (p. 122) dated 1567.<sup>1</sup> In the pedigree of 1623, besides Edw. Alleyn, he has four other children, all sons, viz. John, William, Oliver, and Percival. Of the last three there is no mention in the collection; but in the register of St. Botolph's the baptism of William Allen is recorded on 13 Feb., 1567[8] and the burial of Oliver Allen on 13 Dec., 1563. Apparently the only one of the four brothers who grew up was John Alleyn, whose name frequently occurs in the Catalogue until after 1596. In that year he died, his property being administered by his widow, Margaret Alleyn. Whether his son, also named John, survived him is uncertain; but he too was already dead in 1623, without issue.<sup>2</sup> The elder John was senior to his brother Edward, and, as his baptism is not recorded in the parish register, was presumably born before his parents settled in St. Botolph's. His wife's name being Margaret, it is not improbable that he was the John Allen whose marriage to Margaret Davie was registered on 21 Aug., 1580. In this case his mother-in-law, who is called Julian Crapwell (p. 256), must have had more than one husband.

Some time before 12 Feb., 1580, the widow of Edward Alleyn, the father, married again; for on that day she executed a deed (Mun. 84) as the wife of John Browne, who then and after is called a haberdasher. If we are to believe Mr. Collier and others who have followed him, he was an actor as well; but it is plain that he has been confounded with Robert Browne, and Mr. Collier's confident assumption that it was by his stepfather that Alleyn, to use Fuller's expression, was 'bred a stage player,' is, in fact, entirely unsupported. In default of evidence, both the reasons which led him to choose the profession and the date of his entering it must be left to conjecture. Unlike John Alleyn, who soon became, like his father, an innholder, he continued to be styled merely 'yeoman' and 'gentleman' during the whole of the period covered by the early deeds relating to the property they inherited in Bishopsgate; and it is a curious fact, not hitherto remarked, that on the first occasion on which he is credited with a profession it is that of a 'musicion' (Mun. 106). This was in 1595, by which time his reputation as an actor was fully established; and the designation is additional evidence that in the early theatre there was no strongly marked distinction between the stage and the orchestra. The probability is that he began to act when quite a youth, perhaps at the instigation of his elder brother, who, if not actually a performer, was in some way engaged in theatrical affairs. Edward Alleyn's name first occurs in a list of the Earl of Worcester's players in 1586 (Shakespeare Soc. Papers, vol. iv., 1849, p. 149); but the earliest document here connecting him with the stage is dated 1589 (p. 2). The position he ultimately achieved is sufficiently shown by the passage in T. Nash's Pierce Pennylesse, 1592, first quoted by Chalmers (Malone's Shakspeare, 1821, vol. iii. p. 503): 'Not Roscius or Æsope, those tragedians admyrede before Christ was borne, could ever performe more in action than famous Ned Allen'; and, not to multiply references, the same flattering comparison is made by Ben Jonson in his well-known epigram addressed to Alleyn himself (Collier, Memoirs, p. 6).

On 22 Oct., 1592, Edward Alleyn married Joan Woodward, who was daughter by a former husband of Agnes, then wife of Philip Henslowe. Of the date of this marriage there is no question (p. 6, note 1); but it is singular that 'Mistris Allene' is named in a letter which was almost certainly written in Feb., 1591 or 1592 (p. 5). It is possible therefore that Joan Woodward was his second wife, and the tradition that the Founder was thrice married, formerly current at the College, but latterly discredited, may thus after all be correct. The close proximity of dates certainly need be no objection, if we may judge from the extreme haste with which he married again in 1623. The name and occupation of Joan Woodward's father, as well as the amount of property, if any, which she brought to her husband, have eluded discovery. What evidence there is, however, is decidedly against Mr. Collier's conclusions on the subject (Memoirs, pp. 15, 16). The entries in Henslowe's Diary, from which he assumes that Woodward was engaged in mining operations in Ashdown Forest, clearly relate to the family of Henslowe (p. 157, n. 1), and the parsonage of Firle came to Alleyn not with his wife, but by assignment from A. Langworth (Munn. 109, 144).

Not the least of the advantages which resulted to Alleyn from his marriage was that it brought him into intimate relations with his wife's stepfather, Philip Henslowe.<sup>1</sup> Although the latter appears to have been servant to Agnes Woodward at the time he married her (Memoirs, p. 124), his origin was less obscure than has been generally supposed. In the Visitation of Sussex in 1634 (Harley MS. 1562, f. 114b) he is said to have been the fourth son of Edmond Hensley, or Henslowe, of Lindfield. The latter married Margaret Ridge, of the same county, and was, as we learn elsewhere (p. 157, n. 1), for a long period Master of the Game in Broil Park and Ashdown Forest. The pedigree in the volume quoted goes back as far as Edmond's great-grandfather, William Hensley or Hensleigh, of Devon, who, according to the Visitation of Devon in 1620 (Harleian Society, vol. vi., 1872, p. 123), married Joan, daughter and co-heir of William Whitfield. Philip Henslowe's name, which is spelt in a variety of ways, first occurs in the Catalogue in 1577 (p. 85), when he was already living in the Liberty of the Clink,<sup>2</sup> in Southwark, as he continued to do till his death. In 1584 (Mun. 86) and subsequently he is described as a dyer; but he seems to have acted also as a pawnbroker (p. 157) and to have engaged in sundry other trading speculations. In 1592 or 1593 he became a Groom of the Chamber to Queen Elizabeth, and in 1603 a Sewer of the Chamber to James I. Illiterate himself, <sup>1</sup> In the Surrey Visitation pedigree Joan Alleyn is wrongly called Henslowe's own daughter, the name of Woodward being suppressed. The arms also there represented are argent, a chevron between three cinquefoils gules, for Alleyn, impaling gules, a lion passant gardant or, a chief azure, semé de fleurs de lis of the second. The latter coat, which should be that of Woodward, appears on a seal used by Henslowe (MS. ii. f. 51).

<sup>2</sup> In an assessment on the inhabitants of the Clink for a subsidy, 7 Aug., 1594, Henslowe was assessed on 10*l.*, and so in subsequent years down to 1609. Alleyn was assessed in 1594 on 5*l.*, and in 1598 on 12*l.* (Brit. Mus., Add. MS. 24487, ff. 168, 170). In 1612 Henslowe contributed 10*l.* towards a loan to the King, while Alleyn contributed 15*l.* (Add. MS. 27877, f. 140).

he has gained a permanent place in literary history through the preservation of the volume which recorded his receipts and transactions as a theatrical proprietor and manager at the most critical period of the developement of the English drama, although unfortunately there is nothing to show that he came into contact with its most illustrious exponent. His connexion with the stage, which probably began with his acquisition of the 'Little Rose' in 1585 (Mun. 15) and the erection or re-erection of a theatre on its site in 1587 (Mun. 16), has been fully discussed by Mr. Collier in the introduction to his edition of the Diary, and there is no occasion therefore to dwell upon it here. It is enough to say that from 1592, the year in which the Diary opens and in which Alleyn was married, Henslowe and he were united more or less closely in a theatrical partnership, which was only dissolved by the death of the former in 1616.

Edw. Alleyn, at the time of his marriage, was a member of the company known as the Lord Admiral's, and he still remained attached to it after it passed, on the accession of James I., to Henry, Prince of Wales. In 1593, however, when the plague was raging in London, he joined Lord Strange's company in a provincial tour, and to this we are indebted for the very interesting correspondence with his wife and her step-father (p. 5). The letters on both sides bear pleasing testimony to Alleyn's amiable qualities and the affectionate terms upon which he lived with his 'mouse' and her family. In 1594-1597, as may be gathered from the Diary, he was again performing on the London stage; but, towards the close of the latter year, he is represented as having for some reason 'leafte playinge.' In confirmation of this temporary retirement he is found, both in June and September, 1598, staying with his wife at the house of Arthur Langworth at Broil, in Sussex, where Henslowe addressed to him the two letters on the subject of the Mastership of the Royal Game (pp. 15, 65) one of which contains so remarkable a notice of Ben Jonson. His next appearance is in connexion with the building of the Fortune Theatre, in Golden Lane, Cripplegate. A lease of the site was acquired by him on 22 Dec., 1599 (Mun. 20), and the contract with Peter Streete for its erection was signed on 8 Jan., 1599–1600 (Mun. 22). Although the house itself was built for Henslowe and Alleyn together, all the deeds relative to the site, &c., down to the acquisition of the freehold in 1610 (Mun. 38), are in Alleyn's name only, and the same is the case with the two warrants in furtherance of the project (pp. 17, 18). Ultimately the whole property came into his possession, and it formed part of the endowment of Dulwich College. The date of the completion of the building is unknown, but it was probably open for performance before the end of the year 1600, and Alleyn's own acting no doubt from the first formed one of its principal attractions.

But before this he had begun to provide the public with entertainment of a grosser kind. His interest in the baiting-house at Paris Garden, on the Bankside, dated as far back as Dec., 1594 (p. 67, n. 4), and we have his own word for it that on an outlay of 450*l.* it brought him in 60*l.* a year. It was this success probably, with the desire to get rid of vexatious restrictions, which prompted Henslowe and himself on the death of Ralph Bowes in 1598 to exert all their interest to secure his office of Master of the so-called Royal Game of Bears, Bulls, and Mastiff Dogs. In this attempt they were unsuccessful, the Queen having already granted the reversion to John Dorrington (p. 65); and they were compelled instead to pay the latter a yearly commission for license to bait. Sir William Steward, who succeeded Dorrington in July, 1604 (p. 68, n. 1), made profit from the office in a different way; for, by withholding this license and refusing to take over their house and stock on reasonable terms, he obliged them to purchase his patent at a price which they afterwards declared to have been exorbitant. A new patent in their favour as joint-masters was accordingly made out on 24 Nov., 1604 (p. 67), with the usual fees and privileges, as may be seen on pp. 73-78. Some of these privileges for the taking up of dogs for the King's service were not enforced without trouble to themselves and danger to their subordinate officers. This patent was held by Alleyn as the survivor down to his death; and, notwithstanding complaints to the contrary, the profits in various ways, added to the sums charged for admission to the Garden, were probably considerable. Although too the general management of the baiting seems to have been in the hands of Jacob Mead as lessee or deputy, in presence of royalty or on other special occasions the barbarous sport was directed by the Master in person. Instances of this are recorded by Alleyn himself in his Diary as late as 1622, and a sickening description of his baiting of a lion before the King, Queen, and Prince in 1604 is quoted by Mr. Collier (Memoirs, p. 65) from Stow's Chronicle. The whole of the contents of MS. ii. relating to the subject of the Bear Garden are exceedingly curious, and for graphic illustration of a certain phase of contemporary manners few letters of the time will compare with Sir William Faunt's on p. 82. The only letter here which comes near it in this respect is that containing an account of a trial for murder on p. 105.

Previous to 1605 the investments which Alleyn's growing wealth enabled him to make appear to have been principally leasehold; and, although Mr. Collier speaks as if it were otherwise, his estate in the parsonage of Firle and in the manor of Kennington formed no exception. His negotiations for the purchase of Dulwich probably began in the summer of 1605. This manor was granted by Henry I. in 1127 to Bermondsey Abbey, to which it belonged until the suppression of the house in 1537-8. On 11 Oct., 1544, Henry VIII. granted it (Mun. 331) in capite, at a rent of 33*s.* 9*d.*, to Thomas Calton, of London, goldsmith, the grant including also the advowson of the vicarage of Camberwell. Besides this, Thomas Calton had already acquired from Sir Thomas Pope, on 18 Sept., 1544 (Mun. 330), some land called Rigate's Green, in Dulwich Wood, which had been granted to Sir Humfrey Browne in 1542 (Mun. 324) and sold by him to Pope the following day. From Thomas Calton the whole estate descended to his son, Nicholas Calton, and his grandson, Sir Francis, the latter of whom succeeded his father at ten years of age in 1575 (p. 123) and received livery of his inheritance in 1587 (Mun. 383). The precise date of Alleyn's first acquisition of property in the manor has hitherto been a matter of doubt. It is now ascertained to have been 1 Oct., 1605 (Mun. 456). This purchase, however, seems to have been merely a preliminary, in order to clear off a mortgage held by Sir Robert Lee since 1602 ; and it was followed, on 3 Oct., by articles of agreement<sup>1</sup> on the part of Sir F. Calton for the sale of the manor itself and the whole of his estate, excepting the Camberwell advowson. As the price stipulated was 4,900*l.*, the undated letter (p. 88), in which he peremptorily refuses 4,500*l.* and demands sixteen years' purchase at 320*l.* a year, must belong to a still earlier stage in the proceedings. This letter, interesting in itself, is made doubly so by Alleyn's notes of his resources and 'means for money' written on the back. In his Memorandum-Book he records that he bought the manor on 25 Oct., 1605, for 5,000*l.* (p. 89) ; but the formal deed of sale, for the same sum, is dated 8 May, 1606 (Mun. 471). It should be noted too that this deed includes the Camberwell advowson, notwithstanding that the terms used by Alleyn in his expostulatory letter to Sir Francis Calton on p. 111, coupled with the fact of its omission from the articles of 3 Oct., seem to imply that this was a separate bargain for 800 marks. Including 1,700*l.* for redemption of mortgages, the amount paid in hand by Alleyn was 2,000*l.*, of which he raised 1,300*l.* by the sale of his lease at Firle. The balance of the 5,000*l.* he engaged to pay at the end of six years, with 213*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* yearly for its 'forbearance.' Calton's final acquittance was given on 25 Oct., 1613; but, as may be seen in MS. iii., his applications in the interval for advances on various pretexts, of which the least respectable was the want of 5*l.* to give as a bribe, were almost incessant. In one case at least Alleyn's dealings with him were the reverse of unprofitable; for the lease of Kennington manor, which he bought himself in 1604 for 1,065*l.*, he sold to Calton in 1609 for 2,000*l.* (p. 94, n. 1).

Meanwhile, although Alleyn had become lord of the manor of Dulwich, some part of the soil, freehold and copyhold, still remained in other hands. The successive steps by which he gradually bought up this from Sir Edmond Bowyer, Thomas Calton, and others between the years 1606 and 1614 may be traced in the series of muniments, as well as in his own summary in MS. viii. (Alleyn Papers, p. xiv.); and altogether the estate must have cost him not much less than 10,000*l.* In 1606 he was already styled 'Edward Alleyn, of Dulwich, esquire,' but it is doubtful when he removed his residence thither from Southwark. As he was churchwarden of the Clink Liberty in 1610 and letters continued to be addressed to him there as late as 1612, the probability is that he did not settle at Dulwich until 1613, the same year in which he began the building of the College. Only three transactions before this date need be here specified. One of these, which escaped Mr. Collier's notice, is especially interesting, since, excluding forgeries, it associates Alleyn's name for the first and only time in the collection with that of the greatest of his contemporaries. This was his purchase in 1609, the year of publication, of Shakespeare's Sonnets, recorded by himself on the back of a letter (p. 72) and entered, strangely enough to modern ideas, under 'Howshowld stuff.' The sum of 5*d.* which he gave for the book no doubt represents its published price and is in striking contrast with its present market value.<sup>1</sup> The other transactions referred to are his purchase from the heirs of W. Gill, on 30 May, 1610 (Mun. 38), of the freehold of the Fortune and the adjoining tenements, before held only on lease ; and his sale to Henslowe, in Feb., 1610-11, of his interest in the Bear Garden. The only evidence of this sale is his note in MS. viii. (p. 67, n. 4). It clearly had nothing to do with the Mastership of the Royal Game, but applied only to the fabric and profits of the baiting-house. In 1606, during their joint occupancy, the woodwork of the structure had been renewed (p. 68), and the whole house was rebuilt and adapted both for baiting and dramatic representations in 1613 (Mun. 49), at which date Henslowe had Jacob Mead for a partner. At Henslowe's death it came again to Alleyn, acting at first perhaps for his mother-in-law, with the result that he was involved in disputes with Mead which were not composed until 1619 (p. 80). On another question of interest, as to the time when Alleyn finally quitted the stage, no positive information can be given. He bore the formal title of 'servant to the Prince of Wales' as late as April, 1612 (p. 75); but this is certainly no proof that he was still an active member of the Prince's company, and, as a matter of fact, his name is neither in the list of 1607 nor in the probably earlier list in Harley MS. 252. From the way too in which Heywood speaks of him in his Apology for Actors, 1612,<sup>1</sup> he had evidently ceased to perform for some time previously. His last recorded appearance seems to have been on 15 Mar., 1603-4 (Collier, Hist. Dram. Poetry, 1879, vol. i. p. 339), when, in the guise of Genius, he delivered, 'with excellent action and a well-tun'de, audible voyce,' a congratulatory address to James I. at his entertainment in the City; and it may reasonably be concluded that his retirement preceded, rather than followed, his purchase of Dulwich. At the same time it is highly probable that he continued for a while to take part in the management of the Fortune. From Rob. Browne's letter on p. 35 it may perhaps be inferred that this was the case as late as 1612, after which Henslowe's name, until his death, largely predominates.

Alleyn, in fact, at this period, though still pecuniarily interested in theatrical affairs, had assumed the new character of a landed proprietor living on his estate, and, while Henslowe was bargaining with Daborne for plays, he was busied with the work which, more than his fame as an actor, has preserved his memory. If, as above suggested, he removed to Dulwich in 1613, he must have set about it immediately, since the contract for the erection of a chapel, schoolhouse and twelve almshouses is dated 17 May (Mun. 558). It has been thought that he took the idea of his College from the Charterhouse, founded by Thomas Sutton only two years before; but at the most this is only a plausible conjecture strengthened by a certain likeness between the two charities, each of which combined the care of the old with the education of the young. On the other hand, it is interesting to find among his papers, besides references to Eton and Winchester, the statutes of a somewhat similar institution as far off as Amsterdam (p. 145). These statutes are taken from Pontanus's History of Amsterdam, 1611; and, although they differ widely from his own, the outward resemblance between the Gerontocomium, of which a view is there given, and the building at Dulwich is perhaps not wholly accidental. While the latter was in course of erection Alleyn was deprived by death of the partner and friend whom for more than twenty years he had familiarly called his father. Philip Henslowe died on or about 9 Jan., 1615–6, and the validity of his will was at once disputed by John Henslowe, his nephew and heir-at-law. Both the bill of complaint and the answer of Alleyn and his co-defendants have been preserved (p. 140); but, in the absence of full particulars, the merits of the case are somewhat obscure, nor does it appear how much of the estate ultimately devolved upon Alleyn at or before the death of his mother-in-law, Agnes Henslowe, in 1617. His agreement, however, with the company at the Hope and their subsequent letter to him (pp. 50, 51) show that he immediately assumed the direction of Henslowe's theatrical concerns. The first of these documents is dated 20 Mar., 1615–6; and to a later period in the same year belongs one, if not both, of the interesting letters of Thomas Dekker (p. 51).

By the end of the summer of 1616 the College was so far ready that the chapel was consecrated by Archbishop Abbot on 1 Sept., the first Fellow, Cornelius Lymar, having been appointed the day before. Between 30 Sept. and 17 Oct. the full number of twelve poor brothers and sisters was made up; but the twelve poor scholars, with their master and usher, were not admitted until the latter half of 1617.<sup>1</sup> <sup>1</sup> It is of some interest to notice that the admission of paying scholars began at least as early as 1620 (pp. 185, 186).

In order, however, that the College might not collapse at his death under the statute of Mortmain, it was still imperative for the Founder to procure letters-patent for its incorporation and endowment. There were difficulties in the way, which perhaps he never anticipated ; and his own Diary, which now comes into use, shows plainly what zeal and pertinacity were required to remove them. Naturally the five years, beginning at Michaelmas, 1617, which this volume covers, are the best known period of Alleyn's life ; but the extracts given in the body of the Catalogue make it unnecessary to particularise. The chief, if not the only, direct opposition to his charitable scheme seems to have proceeded from Lord Chancellor Bacon, partly on account of the detriment to the Crown and partly on the ground that 'hospitals abound and beggars abound never a whit the less.' These reasons Bacon explained in a letter to Buckingham (p. 172), whose powerful interest was enlisted on the other side ; and he proposed that at the least the endowment should be reduced from 800*l.* to 500*l.* a year. In thus acting he only maintained the position which he had taken up several years before in connexion with the Charterhouse ; and the arguments which he then employed in his letter to the King (Spedding, Life, vol. iv., 1868, p. 247) to show that foundations such as that of Sutton were productive of more harm than good to the community had equal force against Alleyn's design. The difference was that he was now in a position which made his antagonism far more formidable ; but, notwithstanding this, he only succeeded in delaying the patent for a few months. From one cause and another it did not pass the Great Seal until 21 June, 1619, and the corporate existence of the College dates from 13 Sept. following. On this memorable day Alleyn publicly read and subscribed the Deed of Foundation in the chapel before a distinguished company, whom he afterwards entertained at dinner. The first name in the list of guests is that of Bacon, whose presence on the occasion did equal honour to himself and his host.

By the terms of the deed, Thomas and Matthias Alleyn were named Master and Warden respectively; but, for some time at least, the Founder personally administered the affairs of the College, with the aid of the four Fellows in their several capacities of preacher, schoolmaster, usher, and organist. Possibly he continued to do so until his death, but the entries in the Register cease to be made in his own hand after 1622. In this way, besides his own household and personal expenses, his Diary includes payments of every kind on the College account, which show his minute and unceasing care of its inmates. Unfortunately there is equal proof that his benevolence did not always meet with a fitting return. Almost from the first there was drunkenness among the men and 'incharity' and 'unquietness' among the women, while the Fellows neglected their duties and one of them (p. 109) secretly married Anne Alleyn, the Founder's cousin. Although the entries are as brief as they could well be, the MS. generally is of the highest value for the light it throws upon Alleyn's character and the position in the world which he latterly occupied. Except that he was vexed with lawsuits, which provoked the complaint that, of all his expenses, law was the worst, his life was one of dignified ease and comfort. At various times he was the guest of, or dined in company with, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of London and Winchester, Lord Treasurer Montague, Sir Julius Cæsar, Master of the Rolls, the Countess of Kildare, the Ambassadors Count Gondomar and Sir Noel Caron, Sir Edward Sackville, Dr. John Donne, and many more. Not the least significant of the names mentioned is that of Lady Kildare, who was daughter of the Lord Admiral Nottingham, whose theatrical servant he had formerly been. Among his friends too he numbered the art-loving Earl of Arundel and Sir William Alexander, the poet, afterwards Earl of Stirling, the latter of whom, like Ben Jonson, made his merits the theme of eulogistic verse (p. 60).

Of Alleyn's own hospitality at Dulwich there is abundant evidence, and among those who dined at his table was the famous physician, William Harvey. Members of the Fortune company and other actors were constant guests ; but, as Mr. Collier remarks, the names of the dramatic poets which might have been expected do not occur. Under different circumstances, however, mention is made of Thomas Lodge, whom he imprisoned, and John Taylor, the water-poet, whom he aided with a liberal subscription for one of his works. The identity of Thomas Middleton, Anthony Munday and Matthew Roydon is less certainly made out. On special occasions Alleyn also entertained the poor people of the College ; and in 1621 and 1622 the festivities of Twelfth-night were enlivened by a show and a play performed by the boys. Besides the almshouses which he built in Finsbury or Cripplegate in 1620 (p. 185), many small donations in charity are recorded ; and it is curious to find among the recipients a seminary priest (p. 169) and 'a pore knight' (p. 185). On business, or for such purposes as to see the tilting at White-hall, the Lord Mayor's show, and the funeral of Queen Anne, Alleyn's visits to London were extremely frequent. He then often dined at the house of his friend Lady Clarke, where he seems to have paid for his own drink, or resorted to a tavern. The names of the taverns which he patronised are not without interest. Besides Young's and Hart's ordinaries, they include the Bear, Horn, St. Paul's Head, Cardinal's Hat, Red Cross, Feathers, Plough, Bell in Westminster, Nag's Head, Mermaid, George, Bull's Head, King's Cross, Three Tuns

Dancing Bears, Golden Tun, Larder, and Devil and St Dunstan.<sup>1</sup> On several occasions he rode to Greenwich to bait before the King, and he also went to the Court at Windsor and to Wanstead for an interview with the Marquis of Buckingham. The longest journey which he made was to Winchester in August, 1618, with the object no doubt of seeing the College. Of the London theatres he names the Red Bull and the Rose, as well as the Fortune, the last being repeatedly mentioned. On 31 Oct., 1618, he let it for thirty-one years on lease ; and on 9 Dec., 1621, he records its destruction by fire in a matter-of-fact way which is eminently characteristic. Before 16 Apr., 1622, he had begun the erection of a new house to replace it, and on 20 May he signed leases of some of the shares on terms which bound the lessees to contribute towards the building expenses. Though the contract has not been preserved, it is known from Wright's Historia Histrionica, 1699, that it was a 'large round brick building,' in this respect differing from the original theatre, which was square and chiefly of wood. As there is no note of its opening, it was probably not finished until after Michaelmas, 1622,<sup>2</sup> when the Diary breaks off. From the summary with which the volume concludes, Alleyn's expenditure for the five years ending at that date amounted to 8,504*l.*, of which 1,315*l.* was spent on the College generally and 802*l.* on its building and repairs. Unfortunately no record showing the exact sources and amount of his receipts has been preserved.

In the following year Alleyn lost his wife Joan, with whom he had lived, evidently on most affectionate terms, since 1592. Among her husband's papers there is not a word about her illness and death; but, according to the College Register, she died on 28 June, 1623, and was buried on 1 July. A memorial tablet formerly in the chapel added the information that she was fifty-one years of age and died without issue. Just before her death we get some interesting notices of Alleyn outside the Dulwich collection, which, so far as I am aware, have not been quoted in any account of him. The first of these is in connexion with the abortive preparations for the arrival in England of the Infanta Maria as the bride of Prince Charles and forms part of a letter from Dr. Meddus to Joseph Mead, dated 5 June, 1623 (Harley MS. 389, f. 337). Among his items of news Meddus writes that, in addition to the Duke of Richmond, a number of earls and others, 'Allein, sometime player, now squire of the Beares, [and] Inigo Jones, surveyor of the King's works, rode hence on Tuesday towards Winchester and Southampton to take order for his Majestie's entertainment, with the Prince's and the Ladie Marie's.' This is repeated by John Chamberlain in a letter to Sir D. Carleton, 14 June (Cal. of State Papers, 1619-1623, p. 608), and it is added that the object of the journey was 'for mending the highways and for shows' and that Alleyn and Inigo Jones alone would have done just as well without so many Privy Councillors. The same writer makes another allusion to Alleyn in a letter<sup>1</sup> dated 20 Dec. (Cal. of State Papers, 1623-1625, p. 132): 'But the strangest match in mine opinion is that Allen the player hath lately married a young daughter of the Dean of Paul's, which, I doubt, will diminish his charity and devotion towards his two hospitals.' Although it did not have the effect anticipated, the marriage was certainly calculated to excite surprise. It took place on 3 Dec., 1623, only five months after the death of Joan Alleyn, having been arranged, it appears, as early as 21 Oct.; and, while the bridegroom was fifty-seven years of age, the bride, Constance, daughter of the celebrated Dr. John Donne, must have been about twenty at most. On her mother's side she was niece to the wife of Alleyn's friend and neighbour Sir Thomas Grymes, in whose company she had dined at Dulwich College before Alleyn became a widower (p. 193). The whole history of the match is detailed by Alleyn himself in his very curious letter to Donne written early in 1625 (p. 115), which Mr. Collier has printed at length. It is satisfactory to find that his difference with his father-in-law did not diminish his fondness for his wife. He speaks of her most affectionately in his will and, in addition to a settlement of 1,500*l.*, he left her all her jewels and 100*l.* for present use.<sup>1</sup> The larger sum was secured on his property in Southwark; but in his letter to Dr. Donne he refers also to two leases, worth together 250*l.* a year, which he held besides the estate settled upon the College. One of these was a lease of the manor and rectory of Lewisham, the purchase of which for 1,000*l.* is recorded in his Diary, 15 Dec., 1620 (p. 187); the nature of the other, which comprised tenements in the Blackfriars, will be discussed later. Both these properties seem to have involved him in suits at law (Munn. 183, 184), and, as neither is named in his will, it may be inferred that they passed out of his hands some time before his death. The materials generally for the history of the three years which he survived his last marriage are extremely meagre, nor is the meaning of the few documents preserved always intelligible. It has, however, been reasonably conjectured from a letter of H. Gibb (p. 112) that Alleyn was making interest in 1624 to obtain knighthood. The title was one to which, if only as Master of the Royal Game, he might fairly pretend ; but it was never conferred, and the wonder is that he cared to have it. Both his own letter to Dr. Donne and a letter to him from Sir T. Grymes (p. 115) show that in the beginning of 1625 he was in need of money. Whatever its cause, the difficulty could only have been temporary, since in the following year he was able to purchase an estate of some kind in Yorkshire. The locality of this property has been until now undetermined ; but there can be no doubt that it was situated at Simondstone, in Aysgarth (p. 116, n. 1). There is evidence (p. 117) that Alleyn paid it a visit in July, 1626, and it is not improbable that the journey brought on the illness which ultimately proved fatal. The last extant letter addressed to him is dated 14 Oct., 1626 (p. 117). He was then, as was thought, ‘towards a recovery,’ but he died on Saturday, 25 Nov. This date rests on the unexceptionable authority of Matthias Alleyn, his executor and the first Warden (Collier, Memoirs, p. 182) ; and, according to the Register (below, p. 196), he was buried on the Monday following. So far as appears, he never had any children ; and at the time of his death he had passed his sixtieth year by nearly three months. His will, dated 13 Nov., 1626, is preserved in the Registry of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury and has been printed by Mr. Collier (Alleyn Papers, p. xxi.). Its opening sentences are characterised by the same deep religious feeling which found expression in the hymn on p. 120 and in such pious entries in his Diary as may be seen on pp. 173, 185, 194; and his desire was ‘without any vain funeral pomp or show to be interred in the quire of that chapel which God of his goodness hath caused me to erect and dedicate to the honor of my Saviour by the name of Christ’s Chappell in Gods Gift College,’ &c. Besides the provision for his widow, before mentioned, bequests were made to several of his relations and dependents; and even Sir F. Calton, with whom latterly he had been on unsatisfactory terms, received 100*l.* and the remission of a long-standing debt of 20*l.* His executors were also required to build within two years ten almshouses in each of the parishes of St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, and St. Saviour, Southwark, the inmates of which, as well as of the ten which he had already built in Cripplegate (p. 185), were to be regarded as members of the Dulwich foundation. To his native parish of St. Botolph for the good of the poor was further given the ‘Blew House’ in Dulwich (Mun. 521), which it still retains. The estates which formed the endowment of the College had already been settled; but, in addition, he bequeathed to it ‘as an augmentation’ the residue, after the payment of legacies, of two leases of the Unicorn Inn and of tenements called the Barge, the Bell, and the Cock, in Southwark, together with a quantity of furniture, goods and farm implements. Finally, he left his lands in Yorkshire, also subject to the payment of legacies, to Thomas and Matthias Alleyn, his executors, apparently in their private capacity and not as Master and Warden. On 29 Sept. preceding he had signed the Statutes and Ordinances of his College of God’s Gift, which had no doubt been prepared long before; and the last recorded act of his life was to add two clauses on 20 Nov. (Mun. 594). In the first of these he reserved to himself the right of making additions or alterations and of nominating or displacing the members, ‘at any time or times during my life’; in the other he confirmed the destination of the leases above, with an injunction upon the College to use their utmost endeavours to get them renewed. Upon the subject of the Statutes in general it is impossible to enter within available limits, and it is beyond the scope of this Introduction to attempt anything like a history of Dulwich College. With the exception of the two clauses above mentioned, they are printed at length in Blanch’s Dulwich College, 1877. Not the least noteworthy feature in them is the extent to which they modify the constitution of the College as originally laid down in the Patent and Deed of Foundation, the effect, in one direction, being to establish a public school of the ordinary type, with no restriction on admission beyond a preference given to residents at Dulwich.

It will have been observed that more than one allusion is made in the preceding pages to the presence among the Dulwich manuscripts of modern fabrications. Attention has of course been directed to all such cases, as they occur, in the Catalogue, but the subject is too important not to be referred to here. Besides the letter of Joan Alleyn (p. 26), the treatment of which is peculiar, there are in the collection no less than twenty-two actual forgeries, which, however, by counting under one head those which relate to the same subject, may be reduced to eighteen. The general motive which underlies them all is identical—namely, a desire on the part of the forger to palm off upon the world supposititious facts in connexion with Shakespeare and the other early dramatists. Six of the most glaring of the number have long since been thoroughly exposed. I shall have but little therefore to say about these, beyond expressing my unhesitating agreement in the verdict passed upon them; indeed, it is difficult to believe that any one at all familiar with the handwriting of the period to which they profess to belong could fail to recognise at once their imitative character. As is well known, the question of their genuineness was the subject of vehement debate during the so-called 'Shakspere Controversy' which raged twenty years ago. For my own part, however, I entered upon my present task entirely unaffected by the heat of a conflict which I can barely remember; or, if I had a bias either way, it was a natural disinclination to depreciate the value and authenticity of materials which I had undertaken to catalogue. But the evidence supplied by a systematic examination of every volume and paper in the collection is irresistible; and, so far from being able to defend any one of the documents already impugned, I am compelled to add to them other forgeries which appear to have hitherto remained unnoticed or at least have not been publicly stigmatised. At the same time I take the opportunity of stating that my own opinion in every case is confirmed by that of Mr. E. M. Thompson, Keeper of MSS. in the British Museum, whose exceptionally high authority as an acute and experienced palæographer will be universally admitted.

The credit of being the first to detect the handiwork of a modern impostor among the Alleyn Papers belongs to Mr. N. E. S. A. Hamilton. In the course of his researches in connexion with the Perkins Folio Shakespeare Mr. Hamilton was led to examine other documents, which, like the alleged seventeenth century annotations in that notorious volume, had been published at various times by Mr. John Payne Collier. The result of his investigations appeared in 1860 in a volume the title of which will be found below (p. 4). Among the documents there ably criticised are four belonging to the Dulwich collection, which were first printed in Mr. Collier's Memoirs of Edw. Alleyn. Two of these were rightly condemned by Mr. Hamilton as forgeries from beginning to end, viz. the verses ‘Sweete Nedde, nowe wynne an other wager,’ mentioning ‘Willes newe playe’ (p. 4), and the letter of Marston the dramatist to Henslowe (p. 49); the third is a genuine document, to which a spurious list of players, including Shakespeare, has been added (p. 27); and the fourth is Mrs. Alleyn’s letter to her husband, referred to above (p. 26). In this instance the letter itself has not been tampered with—in fact, from the rotten condition of the paper it would have been impossible to write upon it—but the printed version included a passage concerning Shakespeare, which is not in the original and can hardly be accounted for on any theory assuming the editor’s honesty of purpose. In addition to the above, two more forgeries were exposed by Mr. H. Staunton in the same year in his Life of Shakespeare, and again, in more scathing style, by Dr. C. M. Ingleby in his Complete View of the Shakspere Controversy, 1861. These are a list of certain inhabitants of Southwark in 1596 (p. 13) and a poor’s rate assessment for the Clink Liberty in 1609 (p. 30). Both documents contain the name of Shakespeare, and both were first printed by Mr. Collier. With regard to the assessment list, it is somewhat strange that neither Mr. Staunton nor Dr. Ingleby mentions the first and more remarkable of the two copies. I need not, however, repeat what I have said on this subject in the Catalogue, and I will only call attention to the characteristic subtlety shown by the forger in altering the sums opposite the names which follow his interpolation of ‘M<sup>r</sup> Shakespeare—vi<sup>d</sup>.’ The object of this apparently gratuitous falsification was to remove any ground for suspicion which might have arisen from the amount of Shakespeare’s assessment, when those immediately above and below him paid respectively twopence and a penny. In 1868 Dr. Ingleby again came forward with evidence of an interpolation in Mr. Collier's printed version of a paper relating to Thomas Lodge. In this case also two copies of the same document are extant. This fact, which appears to have been unknown both to Mr. Collier and his critic, led to some confusion, as may be seen in the remarks on p. 15. But, although the copy used by Mr. Collier does contain the passage as he published it, there are particular words which are undoubtedly spurious; and Dr. Ingleby's conclusion, in so far as he denied that the original stated that Lodge was an actor, was perfectly correct.

As I have already stated, some of the papers which, before the collection was arranged, were thought to be lost have again come to light. Among them is the letter purporting to be written by R. Veale (p. 13), which Mr. Collier first printed in 1844 and again as recently as 1879.<sup>1</sup> Referring to it, Mr. Staunton (Life of Shakespeare, 1860, p. 31) wrote: 'The third of these papers has been sought for in vain, and I fear, like nine-tenths of the so-called "New Facts" relative to the life of Shakespeare, is not entitled to the smallest credence.' That this fear was amply justified will be evident to any impartial person who examines the actual document now recovered and observes particularly the laboriously careful manner in which the forger has copied a genuine signature lying before him.

All the forgeries above enumerated have already been openly denounced or marked as strongly suspicious, but the responsibility of condemning the remainder rests with myself. If, however, they have hitherto escaped notice, it is not so much because they are more skilfully executed as because they have probably never before been subjected to a rigorous scrutiny. All of them, in fact, belong to the same most insidious class, and no doubt owe their immunity in a great measure to the genuine character of their surroundings, a mere interpolation, it may be of a single word, being easily passed over where a document wholly spurious would at once challenge attention. A typical example of the forger's ingenuity and method will be found on p. 18. The introduction here and there of such names as 'Lear,' 'Romeo,' 'Pericles,' &c., has had the effect, which was of course intended, of making an inventory of theatrical costumes 'much more important and interesting than a mere list of dresses would be supposed to be.' The words quoted are Mr. Collier's (Memoirs of Edw. Alleyn, p. 17); and the gravity with which he dilates on the significance of these names will excite different feelings in the mind of the reader, according to the opinion he is inclined to hold with regard to Mr. Collier's own share in the imposture.

The interpolations in Henslowe's Diary (pp. 158-162) are characterised by still greater audacity; and we can only be thankful that the hand, which did not scruple to tamper with the names of Nash, Marlow, Dekker, and Webster, stopped short of Shakespeare. Reverence, we may be sure, had nothing to do with the omission, which was more probably the result of a deliberate calculation of the chances of discovery. The risk in this case was of course proportionately greater. Although Malone in his extracts from the Diary might possibly have omitted the entries relating to less noted dramatists, he must infallibly have mentioned the occurrence of Shakespeare's name; and its alleged discovery therefore by a later writer was too likely to provoke troublesome enquiries. But, as it is, when we are asked to believe that all the eight fabricated entries formed part of the manuscript in the time of Malone, the assumption does violence to all probability, since it involves the remarkable coincidence that, from some unaccountable fatality, he missed every one of them, and that too although four at least are anything but inconspicuous. On the other hand, it may be suggested that if any one inserted them, it was Malone himself, in which case it must have been after the appearance of his Historical Account of the English Stage, with a view to future use for a second edition or on some other fitting opportunity. To this it is almost enough to reply that there is nothing in all Malone's published writings to justify the least suspicion that he was capable of forgery; but such an argument may be met by a still stronger objection. If these and the other Dulwich forgeries stood alone it might perhaps be admissible. It is, however, notorious that they belong to a connected series which culminates in the Perkins Folio, and the ramifications of which are found in places and documents to which it cannot be pretended that Malone ever had access. There is, indeed, the strongest reason for believing that one at least of the entries in Henslowe's Diary was not written until shortly before 1845, when it was first printed in Mr. Collier's edition of the MS. This is the forgery of the name of the pretended play 'Galfrido and Bernardo.' Thanks to Mr. Collier's instructive note, quoted on p. 158, the approximate date of the entry, as well as its particular object, which would otherwise have been obscure, may be easily divined; for it could only have been foisted in for the purpose of giving additional interest to the poem by John Drout on the same subject, an unique copy of which had been only recently discovered. And this being so, a pertinent question at once suggests itself, whether we have not here an important clue to the authorship of the forgery—whether, in short, any one was likely to have been at the pains to concoct an allusion to Drout's poem who was not more or less immediately concerned in its discovery or re-publication. Unfortunately the mystery, itself a little suspicious, which is observed in the preface to the re-print prevents this clue from being easily followed up. Excepting the two 'remarkable entries' about Robin Goodfellow (p. 162), which were also first printed in 1845, the rest of the forgeries in Henslowe's Diary must be of somewhat older date, since they all figure prominently in Mr. Collier's History of Dramatic Poetry, published in 1831. As I have treated each separately in its place, I will only observe that, on lately examining once again the entry quoted on p. 161, I found additional evidence of trickery, if any were wanted. The forgery of Webster's name, which is written above the word 'gwisse' or 'Guise,' was not a success; and even Mr. Collier remarked that it was 'perhaps' in a different hand. But, badly executed as it is, it seems to have been the result of a second attempt, for below the line are unmistakable traces of an erasure, so carefully made and smoothed over as scarcely to be detected except from the thinness of the paper. In this case luckily there was no possibility of destroying a failure by the simple process, which has too probably been elsewhere adopted, of cutting it bodily out of the volume.<sup>1</sup>

I now pass on to the interpolations, six in number, which are to be found in Alleyn's own Diary. Between these and the other Dulwich forgeries there is one very remarkable difference. The latter, as we have seen, have all been printed, and, as a simple statement of fact, it is necessary to add, printed first in every instance by Mr. Collier. With the forgeries in Alleyn's Diary it is otherwise, for I cannot find that they have been published or referred to either by Mr.

Collier or any one else. Of the two spurious notices of Shakespeare's As you like it (p. 170) and Romeo (p. 175) there is nothing more to be said except that the forgery is gross and palpable; nor, in the latter case, has the forger weakened the effect of the evidence against him by a desperate attempt to erase the words. He was equally unsuccessful with his entry about 'poor Tom Dekker' (p. 183), which was so clearly suggested by the imprisoned poet's letters on p. 51. Here too he has tried hard to destroy what he had written, but was again prevented by the absorbent nature of the paper. The inserted 'B. Jonson' (p. 179) is noteworthy, not only as the single instance in which this name has been fraudulently introduced into the collection, but from the fact that Mr. Collier, writing in 1841 (Memoirs, p. 154), stated that Jonson was not mentioned in the Diary. For the dexterity with which advantage has been taken of an entry originally left incomplete, this forgery may be profitably compared with that of 'Robin Goodfellow' in Henslowe's Diary. But of all the interpolations in this MS. the most curious and instructive are the two on pp. 172, 174. The motive for the insertion of the words 'of the playhouse' and 'theatre' cannot possibly be mistaken, and the subject must be considered in connexion with Mr. Collier's 'facts tending to prove that Alleyn became the purchaser of Shakespeare's property in the Blackfriars Theatre' (Memoirs of Edw. Alleyn, pp. 103 seqq.). The date Mr. Collier fixes for Shakespeare's final departure from London is the spring of 1612; and he goes on to say that 'it seems very likely, from evidence now for the first time to be adduced,' that his (alleged) interest in the theatre passed to Alleyn as above. The 'facts' upon which he relies are two. The first is thus introduced: 'Among the miscellaneous scraps of paper at Dulwich College is one which appears to be a rough memorandum, in Alleyn's handwriting, of various sums paid by him in April, 1612, for the Blackfriars; and though the theatre is not there expressly named, it will be rendered evident hereafter that it was the "play-house." The paper is precisely in this form:—

"April 1612

Money paid by me E. A. for the Blackfryers . . .	16 olsi
More for the Blackfryers . . . . .	12 6olsi
More againe for the Leasse . . . . .	3 10olsi
The writingesf or the same and other small charges	3 li. 6s. 8d. "

Although this paper is nowhere to be found, it cannot of course be assumed that it never existed; but at the same time, as I shall presently show, it is in the highest degree improbable that the date was as Mr. Collier has given it. Be this, however, as it may, the most that the paper can be taken to prove is that Alleyn held property of some kind in the Blackfriars; and of this there was never any doubt. Mr. Collier's second 'fact' would, on the contrary, be conclusive enough, if it were only authentic. Such as it is, it will be found on p. 115, in the four words 'as the plaiehowse theare,' craftily interlined, where a fraud of this nature would be least suspected, in Alleyn's letter to Dr. Donne. That this forgery and the two in Alleyn's Diary above were written by the same hand and for the purpose of affording one another a mutual support, is self-evident; the strange thing is that, although Mr. Collier printed the first he did not print the others, but actually quoted at length the genuine entry in which one of them occurs without the interpolation. Whatever the explanation of this, his theory that Alleyn's Blackfriars property comprised the theatre has absolutely no foundation to rest upon. It might be enough to have pointed out that the only evidence in its favour is undeniably of modern manufacture; but it is possible to go still further. On Mr. Collier's own showing the property referred to in the paper above is identical with that constantly mentioned by Alleyn in his Diary, for which he paid 160*l.* a year rent to Edm. Traves. But, so far from having been acquired, as Mr. Collier makes out, in or before April, 1612, it did not come into his hands until Shakespeare had been dead for nearly a year. The real date of his lease, as we now know from Mun. 184 (p. 271), was 26 Mar., 1617; and it cannot therefore be too rash to conjecture that Mr. Collier's date is a misreading of the later year. In this way too we get an easy solution of what is otherwise a singular fact; for, if the date 1612 were correct, the transaction ought to be found recorded in Alleyn's Memorandum-Book (MS. viii.), where similar purchases are entered down to 1614. But there can be no stronger proof that the building which Alleyn was anxious to save from demolition in August, 1618, was not the Blackfriars Theatre than the sheriff's return in the Record Office quoted on p. 173. The language of this document is sufficiently precise; and, apart from the fact that the theatre was not a new building and so did not come under the statute, its situation, if at all represented by Playhouse Yard, makes its identity with Alleyn's houses in Swan Alley, which was at the other end of the parish, simply impossible.

All the cases of forgery detected have now been briefly touched upon,<sup>1</sup> but the very serious question of their authorship has yet to be decided. Here, however, the reader must be left to draw his own conclusions. This is not a controversial work, and the subject cannot be adequately discussed without going beyond the Dulwich collection and bringing into evidence the entire system of closely analogous impostures which found their way into print in the second quarter of the present century. Although it is impossible to ignore the fact that Mr. Collier, who gave them to the world as genuine matter, has been distinctly charged with their fabrication, it is no part of my duty either to arraign or defend him. Having stated the facts, just as they stand, with regard to the Dulwich series, with which alone I am concerned, and having, as I hope, secured the collection from the risk of being similarly tampered with in the future, I have done all that is necessary; and if Mr. Collier's name has been specially prominent, the blame rests with himself. Even on the most charitable supposition, the ease with which he allowed himself to be imposed upon argues the most extraordinary carelessness and incapacity. On one point I think no doubt need be entertained. Although the style of handwriting adopted varies considerably and exhibits different degrees of imitative skill, my own decided opinion is that all the forgeries here were executed by one and the same person, whoever he may have been; and, looking both to their appearance and character, I certainly see no cause for making an exception of those in Alleyn's Diary. As the latter were doubtless meant for use and not inserted in mere wantonness, it would be interesting to learn whether an edition of the MS. was ever contemplated and, if so, by whom. It may be laid down as a general rule that literary frauds of the kind found at Dulwich are not concocted by one person in order that the benefit of them may be reaped by another; but there may conceivably be exceptions. After Malone's death there is nothing to show whether any one used the MSS. before Mr. Collier; but, while the earlier forgeries need not be anterior in date to 1831, the most recent may be as late as 1845 or, in the case of Alleyn's Diary, later still. At the most, there could only have been a very few persons who had access to the collection, and who, at the same time, were keenly enough interested in dramatic history not to shrink from actual fabrication in order to support particular theories or to have the credit of discovering new facts of professed importance.

Of the Alleyn collection in general nothing more need here be said ; but the Court-Rolls of Dulwich manor, which have been very briefly catalogued, claim some notice. Independently of their genealogical and topographical value, it is superfluous to point out the interest of this particular class of record for the history of English nomenclature. There is no deficiency in this respect in the series at Dulwich, and in the earlier rolls especially a variety of surnames may be traced back to their primitive forms. Thus, to take a few examples only, there are, from nationality, le Freynsshe<sup>1</sup> and le Welsche, Inglysse, Pycard, and Scot ; from residence, By the Wode and Atte Wode, Atte Styghele and Atte Style, Atte Dene and Adene, In the Lane and Adlane, Atte Naysshe, Atte Welle, and the like, besides of course the many local names of the kind represented by Shrowesbury, de Waldene, and de Boloyne. Equally prominent are the names denoting occupation or office. Among others, they include le Cartere, le Webbe, le Mareschal, le Meleward, le Sephurde, le Taburer—whence Tabor—la Kembestre, a female comber or wool-carder—whence Kempster—and Spyndelman, a maker of spindles. Mental and moral qualities account for Margaret la Wyse and for Godeman ; bodily characteristics for le White, Baldhevd, and Alice Whiteleg, though the last has been also derived from the Saxon Wihtlæg. In addition to these are to be found le Brand, Courteour, and Hordappel; together with Juliana Kacheuache and Alice Wrekedod or Wrekedoddys, neither of which is easy to explain. Kachevache, indeed, is strongly suggestive of Kekewich, but the family who bear this name are supposed to have obtained it from a place called Kekewick in Cheshire. The jingle again recalls the term kicky-wicky or kicksy-wicksy, disdainfully applied by Parolles to a wife.<sup>1</sup> As to the other name, ‘duds’ being a well-known cant-word for clothes, Alice Wreck-duds may possibly represent a fourteenth-century equivalent for Shakespeare’s Doll Tear-sheet. The common use of the prefix le or la, by which our ancestors supplied the want of a definite article in Latin, will be remarked, and it leads to the inference that some, if not most, of the above names were as yet merely indicative of the individual. And, even after they became, so to speak, stereotyped patronymics, new surnames were no doubt continually being formed. One variety of the process is exhibited here in the case of Robert Aylmer, alias Goodsone, where an alternative personal epithet—whether at first applied in compliment or irony, or merely meaning ‘godson’—appears afterwards to have supplanted altogether the original surname, itself turning into Goosone and ultimately perhaps into Gosson. Gradual changes of the same kind, by which family names took their existing shapes, are elsewhere also seen actively at work, and in the succession of rolls we get such transitions as those of Spyndelman into Spyleman and Spilman, In the Lane into Lane, and Atte Bregge into Briggs. As curiosities of the fifteenth century I may instance Pottes-blode, Goldman, the romantic Gawayn, Pyebaker, Drynkwater, Longswete, Laweman, Ida Inquirour and Thomas Deville. The last, which is probably the same as Dybbyll (p. 276), is perhaps not so bad a name as it looks. The sixteenth century yields Cownsellor, Sharparowe, and, worst of all, Bugbeard.<sup>1</sup> Another historically interesting name makes its appearance, temp. Elizabeth, in Becket, of the same origin probably as 'Thomas Becke, son of Giles a Becke,' who was steward of the manor.

With regard to the subject-matter of the Rolls, I can only refer briefly to a few of the more remarkable presentments at the court of the manor. The earliest specially worth quoting is in 1399, when complaint was made that 'quidam malefactores qui dicuntur Lumbardes' came with ferrets and traps into the Lord's warren for the purpose of catching rabbits. The term Lumbardes<sup>2</sup> is very curious. It appears to be employed generically to denote a particular class of evil-doers, but how they came to be so designated it is difficult to understand. Although the Lombard merchants of London were open to charges of usurious dealings, poaching was about the last offence to which they were likely to be addicted. It is just possible, however, that a contemptuous abuse of their name was one result of their general unpopularity at this period. Evidence that they were in ill-favour at the beginning of the reign of Henry IV. is found in the Chronicle of Adam of Usk (ed. E. M. Thompson, p. 53), who speaks of severe restrictions being placed upon them in 1400.

The Roll for 1402 contains the first of a long series of entries relating to Romseluer. Under this head 1*d.* was then claimed for the Lord from every tenant owning beasts to the value of 30*d.*, the authority of an old Custumary being adduced in support of the contention. The tenants, however, denied all knowledge of such a custom, and it was therefore resolved to examine the Rolls to discover when it was last presented and how it fell into disuse. Although the result of this enquiry is not stated, it was evidently in favour of the Lord, the payment being regularly made from 1403 onwards. It is entered under a multiplicity of forms, such as Romseluer, Rompans, Rompeny, Romppeny, Rumpepeny, Rumppenys, Romppenes, and Rome pence. Notwithstanding the similarity of name, it can hardly have had anything to do with the so-called Peter's pence, paid yearly to the Pope. It continued to be paid after this impost was suppressed by Henry VIII. in 1534, and latterly it is represented as a customary payment for the right of common pasture.

Besides the ordinary business relating to the descent and transfer of land, which was held 'per virgam,' the court, as usual, took cognisance of various offences and breaches of manorial rights. Cases of assault, the use of false measures, the breaking of the assise of bread and beer, neglect to clear watercourses, and such like, are of constant occurrence. Fines too were imposed for digging turf 'in solo domini,' for cutting down a tree to take a swarm of bees, for tearing wool off a sheep's back, and for milking other people's cows; and in 1440 several persons were amerced for not coming 'ad le Bedrepe in autumpno, ut debuerunt, quum summoniti fuerunt,' the so-called Bid-reap being a day's service at harvest due to the Lord. The reign of Henry VII. seems to have been a quarrelsome period in the manor. Assailants were no longer content with drawing blood 'cum i baculo,' but had recourse to the more formidable 'hokebill,' 'pychfork,' and 'hanger'; and the fines had to be raised from 4*d.* to 1*s.* and 1*s.* 8*d.* One Richard Lane showed himself especially unmanageable, and in 1487 he shared with John Lane and two women the distinction of being presented as ‘communes garulatores et pacem [pacis] domini regis perturbatores.’ The effect upon him, however, was but slight, for he was in trouble again the next year, and he was fined for assault with a ‘hokyd byll’ as late as 1523. Another class of bad character appears in 1522 in the person of John Wylkokes, who had to pay 10*s.* ‘quia custodit hospicium vocatum a blynde ostery et supportat homines et mulieres malæ gubernacionis.’ Later in the same reign, in 1533, we get an ordinance forbidding the collection of ‘les crabbes’ before St. Bartholomew’s Day, 24 Aug.; and in 1564 the whole homage were commanded under penalty to look to the proper placing of the ‘meare stones,’ or boundary marks. At the same court—to select one such instance out of many—John Bagger was fined 1*s.* for selling beer ‘per le pottes vocatos stone cruses et non per le pottes sigillatos cum sigillo.’

Several other entries in Elizabeth’s reign attest the enforcement of the well-known statute 33 Hen. VIII. cap. ix. for the encouragement of archery and the restraint of unlawful games. Thus in 1574 a number of persons were presented ‘quia luserunt apud quoddam certamen illicitum vocatum Loggettes.’ Logget is a diminutive form of log, and the game was played by throwing small staves or billets of wood at a stake fixed in the ground.<sup>1</sup> It answered therefore to the modern ‘Aunt Sally’ more closely than to nine-pins, with which it has sometimes been identified. Again, in 1578 Christopher Curson was fined 6*s.* 8*d.* for playing ‘apud cartas lusorias vocatas cardes,’ and in 1587 John Lewes and others had each to pay 4*d.* for playing ‘ad globos,’ or bowls. The same game is apparently referred to in a presentment made in 1597, that Thos.

Calton and eleven more ‘gobulaverunt in aperto loco contra formam statuti.’ The party in this case got off cheaply with a penalty of 2*d.* a head. In 1576 there are two entries of a man being fined 3*s.* 4*d.* ‘quia usus est galliro in die dominica’; where ‘galliro’ doubtless stands for ‘galero,’ a hat. The penalty was incurred under the statute 13 Eliz., cap. xix., 1570, by which every person above seven years of age, excepting the nobility and others, was compelled to wear upon Sundays and holy-days ‘a cap of wool knit, thicked and dressed in England,’ &c.<sup>1</sup> This was for the benefit of the English cappers, multitudes of whom, according to the preamble of the statute 8 Eliz., cap. xi., 1565, were ‘impoverished and decayed by the excessive use of hats and felts.’

Walter Boane, fined 1*s.* ‘for a drounkard’ in 1611, is only worth mentioning as a melancholy example of confirmed evil habits. The man became a poor-brother of Dulwich College in 1619, and his bibulous propensities are more than once referred to in the Founder’s Diary. The last entry which I shall quote from the Rolls is dated April, 1622. It records that Theodore Owle was fined 40*s.* because his ‘penny wheaten bredd’ weighed but 7½ ounces, whereas, wheat being sold at the last market for 40*s.* the quarter, it ought to have weighed 12 ounces or more.

It still remains that I should say a few words on the subject of the manuscripts which are not included in the Alleyn collection proper. The only volumes in the body of the Catalogue which call for remark are those relating to the two collections of pictures bequeathed to the College by William Cartwright and Sir Peter Francis Bourgeois. In dealing with Cartwright’s autograph catalogue (MS. xiv.) I have contented myself with extracting the titles of the portraits, which alone possess any interest; and I have added such brief explanatory notes as seemed necessary. The contents of MS. xvi. are more important, and have been more fully treated. Among them, the letters addressed by Le Brun, the picture-dealer, to Noel Desenfans, the original collector of what is now known as the Dulwich College Gallery, are sufficiently curious and interesting to be printed at length, although it is unfortunately not possible to trace many of the pictures to which the writer refers. I have also reproduced in full the list of the collection of Desenfans drawn up by himself for the purpose of insurance in 1804. As an authentic record of its extent at that date, with the owner's opinion as to the authorship and money's worth of each picture, the list is of considerable value; and it is a pity that its existence was not made known in time enough for notice to be taken of it in the Catalogue of the Dulwich Gallery recently published.

The manuscripts included in the Appendix are of a more miscellaneous character and range over a longer period. Two of the earliest, MSS. xxii. and xxiv., deserve particular notice. The former is made up of fragments of several manuscripts connected together probably not later than the fifteenth century, but the most important article is the English poem on the Life of Christ. Though it would be rash to assert that the copy is unique, I know of no other, and it has no small philological interest. MS. xxiv. contains part of Robert Mannyng's well-known poem Handlyng Synne, copies of which, however, are so rare that the discovery of another, even in a mutilated condition, is welcome. Among the later volumes, the most interesting are the political tracts, MSS. xxviii., xxix., xxxi., and xxxv. The first of these has the distinction of being the original copy presented by the author to Sir Christopher Hatton; and, addressed as it is by the Clerk of the Privy Council to the Lord Chancellor, the doctrine laid down in it is somewhat startling. Osborne's translation of a speech of Æschines (MS. xxvii.) is also the original, dedicated to Sir C. Hatton; and the fact that the letters in MS. xxxv. are addressed to one of Hatton's descendants makes it probable that some of the other volumes belonged to the same family. They must have come to Dulwich at some time after 1689, when the above letters were written, but how they found their way thither is a mystery.

In conclusion, I desire to express my obligations to the Governors of the College for the readiness with which they agreed to my suggestions with regard to the plan of the Catalogue, and for the general freedom and indulgence accorded me during its preparation. I have further to thank the Rev. William Rogers, the Chairman, for giving me facilities for the inspection of the register of Alleyn's native parish of St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, of which he is Rector; and to Mr. William Young, another member of the Court, I am indebted for the loan of some highly interesting and useful notes, which I venture to hope he will hereafter expand into a history of the College. From the Rev. Alfred Carver, D.D., the Master, I have throughout received cordial assistance, though I have too often been compelled to trespass upon his valuable time. Dr. Carver's interest in the collection is of long standing. A proposal that the manuscripts should be arranged and catalogued was made by him, as I am informed, twenty years ago; but, although it was at once sanctioned by the Governors, various circumstances made it advisable to defer the execution of the design till a more favourable opportunity. Lastly, I must record my sense of the kindness of my friend and official chief, Mr. E. M. Thompson, who has not only given me the benefit of his constant advice, but has read all the sheets in their passage through the press.

MS. No. I.

ALLEYN PAPERS. Vol. I. Letters and Papers relating to the English Drama and Stage during the life of Edward Alleyn and to the subsequent History of the Fortune Theatre; 1559-1662.

I. LETTER from Thomas Phillipson to Francis —ton, merchant, in London, chiefly on matters connected with the recovery of debts, mentioning 'your brother Phillips' and 'cozen Thomas Bacon,' John Welcheman, George Gybson, and others, and including the passages, 'I founde none so vnresonabell as W<sup>m</sup> Kempte,<sup>1</sup> for I was not so few tymes

<sup>1</sup> Possibly Will. Kemp, the famous comedian, whose name is spelt Kempt in the list of actors prefixed to the folio Shakespeare of 1623. If so, Kemp was an older contemporary of Shakespeare than has hitherto been supposed. According to Mr. J. P. Collier (Hist. of Dram. Poetry, &c., ed. 1879, vol. iii. p. 332), the earliest mention of him is in 1589, when T. Nash dedicated to him his Almond for a Parrot; and he appears to have been alive so late as 1605. The terms, however, in which he is addressed by Nash show that his reputation was then fully established, and he may have been quite a young man when this letter was as twenty to speke with him, and in the ende, when I met him, his awnser was otherwise then I thoughte it woulde have bin, but nowe I parceve he hathe not his name for noughe. Yet, if I were as youe, I woulde not so take it at his hande ; for, if I mighte be so bolde as to wrighte it, it was playne k[na]very and a harde shiftinge awnser, for to say, when I cam to him for to have him firme the bille, that he had lefte a sh[irte?] at my howse worthe bothe them, which I have lefte with my brother Marke for youe, promysinge youe of my faythe that sence your goinge it was never worne of no man, nor I dare saye shall not be. Wherefore youe maye doe as youe thincke good, but in my judgement I promis youe he were worthey to pay dobell for them.... As for Anthony Babington, he is as blynde as youe lefte him, and yet he wente downe into the contrey for money, but, as he sayethe, he coulde not get his charges of his brother'; Gravesend, 3 Aug., 1559. f. 1.

Formerly used as a cover for art. 2 in MS. v., below ; owing to this the address has been so much worn as to be hardly legible.

2. DEED OF SALE by Richard Jones,<sup>1</sup> of London, yeoman,

written. The name was a common one, as Mr. Collier shows ; but he does not mention Will. Kempe, son of Steph. Kempe, of Broxbourne, apprenticed to Will. Cooke, 1 Nov., 1566 (Stationers' Register, ed. Arber, vol. i. p. 146), or Will. Kemp, whose marriage to Cole Holwyn is entered in the register of St. Botolph's, Bishopsgate, 13 June, 1568. Mr. Jos. Hunter (Chorus Vatum Anglicanorum, Brit. Mus., Add. MS. 24487, f. 128) gives some reasons in favour of a not very probable theory that the actor was identical with Will. Kemp, of Spain's Hall, Essex, who imposed on himself a vow of silence for seven years on account of idle words he had spoken. In that case he was born in 1555, and died in 1628. The occurrence of the name of Anthony Babington in the same letter is curious, for a Will. Kempe was the author of A Dutifull Invective against the most Haynous Treasons of Ballard and Babington, 1587. The Anthony Babington here mentioned was probably an older member of the same family as the conspirator, perhaps Anth. Babington, of Tymmore, buried at Lichfield, 16 Mar., 1579 (Nichols, Topographer and Genealogist, vol. i. p. 335).

to Edward Allen, of London, gent., for 37*l.* 10*s.*, of all his 'share, parte and porcion of playinge apparelles, playe Bookes, Instrumentes and other commodities' held by him 'joyntelyc with the same Edwarde Allen, John Allen,<sup>1</sup> citizen and Inholder of London, and Roberte Browne,<sup>2</sup> yoman'; 3 Jan., 31 Eliz., 1588[9]. Signed; with seal, 'R.I.' f. 3.

Printed in the Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, by J. P. Collier, Shakespeare Society, 1841, p. 198.

On the back, in the hand of Edward Alleyn, is a list of thirteen documents relating to the family of Calton and their property at Dulwich, dated from 1542 to 1611. They are among the muniments catalogued below.

3. DEED OF SALE by William Wardelo, of London, yeoman, to John Alleyn, of London, 'inholder,' for 5*l.*, of 'one longe cloke [cloak] of black velvett and lyned with taffatye'; 8 Aug., 31 Eliz. [1589]. Signed; with seal. f. 4.

4. DEED OF SALE by Isaacke Burges, of Clifford's Inn, London, gent., to John Allene, of London, innholder, for 16*l.*, of 'one cloke of velvett, with a cape imbrothered with gold, pearles and redd stones, and one roabe of cloth of golde'; 23 Nov., 33 Eliz., 1590. Signed; with seal. Witnesses, John Deane, scrivener, and James Tonstall.<sup>3</sup> f. 5.

wards one of the Lord Admiral's players (Henslowe's Diary, pp. 6, 257). Possibly the Rich. Jones who was baptised at St. Botolph's, Bishopsgate, 16 Mar., 1561-2. See also below, art. 8.

<sup>1</sup> Elder brother of Edw. Alleyn, described in 1580 as servant to 'the Lord Sheffelde,' and in 1589 as 'servaunte to me, the Lo. Admyrall' (see below, MS. iii. art. 3, MS. iv. art. 11). He died before 5 May, 1596 (see below, Mun. 110).

<sup>2</sup> See art. 8. Mr. Collier is wrong in assuming Rob. Browne to be Alleyn's stepfather (Memoirs, p. 4). The name of the latter was John Browne (Mun. 75).

Printed, Alleyn Papers, ed. J. P. Collier, Shakespeare Society, 1843, p. 11.

5. DEED OF SALE by John Clyffe, of Ingstone [Ingatstone], co. Essex, gent., to John Allen, of London, innholder, and Edw. Allen, of London, gent., for 20*l.* 10*s.*, of 'one blacke velvet cloake with sleves ymbrodered all with silver and golde, lyned with blacke satten stryped with golde'; 6 May, 33 Eliz., 1591. Signed; with seal. Witnesses, Godfrey Reyner, scrivener, and James Tonstall. f. 6.

Printed, Alleyn Papers, p. 12.

6. W. P. TO EDWARD ALLEN, urging him to accept a theatrical wager against 'the partie affected to Bently,' with 'libertie to make choice of any one playe that either Bently or Knell<sup>1</sup> plaide,' and assuring him that his 'meaninge was not to preiudice Peeles credit': accompanied by six lines of verse, beginning, 'Deny me not, sweete Nedd, the wager's downe'; circ. 1590. Finely written, with the words 'Ned Allen,' 'sweete Nedd,' and 'English crowne,' in gilt letters. f. 7.

Printed by Malone, Shakespeare, ed. Boswell, 1821, vol. iii. p. 335, and in Collier's Memoirs of Edw. Alleyn, p. 12. See also Dyce, Works of George Peele, 1828, p. x.

7. SEVENTEEN LINES OF VERSE beginning, 'Sweete Nedde, nowe wynne an other wager,' purporting to be written on an occasion similar to the above. f. 8.

8. RICHARD JONES<sup>1</sup> to Edward Alleyn: thanks him for his great bounty during his sickness; is 'to go over beyond the seeas with Mr. Browne and the company,' and prays for a loan of 3*l.*, with which to release from pawn a suit of clothes and a cloak; will send over the first money he gets, for in England he gets nothing, or only a shilling a day; prays to God for his health and 'mistris Allenes'; [Feb., 1591-2?]. Endorsed by Alleyn, 'Mr. Jones his letter wheron I lent hym 3<sup>1</sup>'; and in the margin, partially torn away, is an acquittance to 'Master Allen,' dat. . . . Feb. f. 9.

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 396; Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 96; Alleyn Papers, p. 19.

<sup>1</sup> See Cohn, Shakespeare in Germany, 1865, p. xxxviii., where is a passport from Lord Howard in favour of Robert Browne, John Bradstreet, Thomas Saxfield [Sackville], and Richard Jones, going to Germany 'avec intention . . . d'exercer leurs qualitez en fait de musique agilitez et joeuz de commedes, tragedies et histoires,' dat. 10 Feb., 1591 [1-2?]. If this letter, as is almost certain, refers to the same expedition, the mention of Mrs. Alleyn is curious, since Alleyn was not yet married to Joan Woodward. It is some slight evidence, therefore, in favour of the tradition that he was three times married. See Memoirs, p. 180.

Rich. Jones, as appears from Henslowe's Diary, was back in England between the years 1594 and 1601, but he seems to have been again abroad before Henslowe's death in Jan., 1615-6 (see below, artt. III, II2). Rob. Browne was at Leyden with a company in Oct., 1590. Cohn wrongly supposes that he was Alleyn's stepfather (see above, art. 2); but he is right, perhaps, in identifying him with Rob. Browne, who accompanied the Earl of Lincoln on an embassy to Cassel in 1596. The latter, however, may have been a messenger of the Privy Chamber of the same name (Cal. State Papers, 1598-1601, pp. 191, 192, &c.). A Rob. Browne, of Shoreditch, occurs below (art. 12), and another, of Clerkenwell (art. 66). See also art. 38 and Collier, Hist. of Dram. Poetry, &c., vol. iii. p. 386.

13. PHIL. HENSLowe to Edw. Alleyn: all send hearty commendations and are glad to hear of his good health, for they heard that he had been very sick at Bath and that another had played his part; they feared much because they had no letter when the other wives had, and his 'mowse' wept not a little, thinking he had conceived some unkindness of her; prays him to continue to write, as they themselves would do oftener if they knew where to send; they received a letter written at 'Seant James tide,'<sup>1</sup> mentioning his 'whitte wascote' and his 'lvte bockes,' and another which Peter<sup>2</sup> brought with his horse; his wife prays night and day for his health, and that God may 'seace his hand' in order that she may have him home again; the garden is doing very well, and the 'beanes are growen to hey headge and well coded,' but his tenants 'weax very power' and can pay no rent; the joiner says he will make 'such good stufe and suche good peneworthes' as he hopes will content him; as for his counsel to keep the house clean, &c., they do this and more, for they 'strowe yt withe hartie prayers vnto the lorde'; prays him to commend him to his fellows, for lack of whom he grows poor, so that he can send no gifts but a good and faithful heart; thanks them all for their tokens, and as for the plague, can send no exact account, as it is forbidden, but 1,700 or HENSLOWE to Edward Alleyn: complains that they do not hear from him as they would wish; if they themselves could send as certainly, they would write often; almost all his [Henslowe's] neighbours are dead of the plague, and his two 'wenches' have had it, but have recovered, and he, his wife, and two daughters are very well; the market at Smithfield was very bad, and as no one offered more than 4*l.* for his [Alleyn's] horse, it has been sent into the country till his return; as for his cloak, there was no cloth sold by retail, but all was bought up wholesale in two days, 'so the fayre lasted but iii dayes'; his stockings are dyed, the joiner has set up the 'portolle' and brought a 'corte cobert,' and the garden is very well, the 'spenege bead and all sowed'; Lord Pembroke's<sup>1</sup> players 'ar all at home and hauffe bene thes v or sixe weackes, for they cane not saue ther carges with trauell, as I heare, and weare fayne to pane [pawn] ther parell for ther cargo'; .... In a postscript:—his wife prays him to send word what 'goodman Hudson'<sup>2</sup> pays for rent; as for his tenants, nothing can be got from them; Greges [Griggs] and his wife send commendations, and also 'your sister Phillipes' and her husband,<sup>3</sup>

Nottingham 1596, d. 1624. His company became in 1603 the servants of Henry, Prince of Wales.

<sup>1</sup> Erected about the year 1587 (see below, Mun. 16). It stood to the S.W. of London Bridge, and is depicted, as a circular building, in a plan of London in 1593 by P. van den Keere from a drawing by J. Norden, a facsimile of which is given by Mr. Halliwell, Illustrations, p. 4. See also Collier, Hist. of Dram. Poetry, vol. i. p. 328, vol. iii. p. 126.

<sup>2</sup> Both the Lord Chamberlain's and the Lord Admiral's companies were acting here in 1594 (Henslowe's Diary, p. 35).

19. RICHARD VEALE to Philip Henslowe:—

'Mr. Hinslowe, This is to enfourme you that my M<sup>r</sup> the Maister of the reuelles hath rec. from the ll. of the Counsell order that the L. Chamberlens seruautes shall not be distourbed at the Blackefryars acording with there petition in that behalfe, but leaue shall be giuen vnto theym to make good the decaye of the saide House, butt not to make the same larger then in former tyme hath bene; ffrom thoffice of the Reuelles this 3 of maie 1596. p me Ric. Veale. Rich. Veale.' f. 28.

First printed by Mr. Collier, Shakespeare, 1844, vol. i. p. clvi. See also his Hist. of Dram. Poetry, ed. 1879, vol. i. p. 290.

This letter, which is on a slip of paper measuring  $8 \times 2$  inches, is an obvious forgery. It is closely connected in subject with the petition in the Public Record Office, printed, as genuine, by Mr. Collier, Hist. of Dram. Poetry, ed. 1831, vol. i. p. 298 (ed. 1879, i. 288), but officially condemned as a forgery. See Hamilton, Enquiry, p. 96; Ingleby, Shakspere Controversy, p. 289. The body of the letter appears to be in the same hand as the spurious certificate, of which a facsimile is given by Dr. Ingleby, p. 248, sheet x., no. iii.; and the signature is a careful imitation of the signatures to receipts of Rich. Veale on behalf of Edmund Tylney, Master of the Revels, contained in Henslowe's Diary, f. 81b, ed. Collier, p. 179. The signature first written, 'p me Rich. Veale,' is scored through with the pen.

22. PETITION to [George Cary, second] Lord Hunsdon, Lord Chamberlain, from Richard Toppin, praying for relief in the same suit against Thomas Lodge and Philip Henslowe, the latter having disregarded a warrant of Lord Cobham, late Lord Chamberlain; [Jan., 1597-8]. With the endorsement:—'Henchley, you are to satisfie this Petitioner in what shalbe due vnto him, or otherwise he is to take his remedie by course of lawe against you; Courte, this 29th of Januarie, 1597[8]. G. Hunsdon.' Contemporary copies. f. 31.

Printed, Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 44.

23. ANSWER of Philip Henslowe to the preceding petition, repeating his former defence, and asserting that Lord Cobham's warrant, issued in the mistaken belief that he 'was priuie to the place of Lodg his biding,' merely ordered him to attach the latter, which he was unable to do, 'for that he is (as I heare) passed byond the seas'; [1598]. Two copies, one a draft with corrections, the other a fair copy. ff. 32, 33.

time in the Memoirs of Edw. Alleyn, p. 45, runs as follows:—‘The truth is, right honorable, that one Thos. Lodge beinge aboue a yeare nowe paste arrested within the Libertie of the Clinck (wheare I am a dweller) att the suite of the said Toppin, uppon an action of debte, and haveinge some knowledge and acquaintaunce of him as a player, requested me to be his baile’; and Mr. Collier adduces this as a proof that Lodge was an actor as well as a dramatist. In the original draft, however, the sentence ends, ‘and haveinge of me some knowledge and acquaintaunce requested me to be his baile’; but the words ‘of me’ have been cancelled, and ‘of him as a player,’ together with ‘Tho.’ before ‘Lodge’ higher up, have been inserted between the lines in a hand different from that in which all the rest of the corrections are made. As these latter corrections alone, and that too without exception, are found in the fair copy, it is obvious that the alterations quoted above are of later date; and they have all the appearance of a modern forgery. Mr. Collier makes no reference to the fair copy, and was probably unaware of its existence; while, on the other hand, Dr. Ingleby had certainly not seen the draft, when he printed the document from the fair copy, with a facsimile, in his tract Was Thomas Lodge an Actor?, 1868, and argued upon the assumption that it was the identical paper described and printed by Mr. Collier.

Printed, with many inaccuracies, Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 19.

The words ‘for Leir,’ ‘Romeos,’ ‘in Dido,’ and ‘for Pericles’ have been introduced by another hand, with an evident attempt to imitate the original. The same hand has tampered with the entry ‘5. i blew damask cote the moro [?],’ changing it into ‘the more in Venus,’ i.e. the Moor in Venice. Mr. Collier (loc. cit.) calls special attention to all these spurious items, as proving that ‘Alleyn acted parts, if not in Shakespeare’s plays, in plays upon the same stories as those employed by our greatest dramatist’; but he is silent about the difference of hand.

38. JOANE ALLEVNE<sup>5</sup> to Edw. Alleyne, her husband: rejoices at his good health, and thanks God that she, her mother, and whole house are well, and that the sickness<sup>6</sup> about them is ceasing; all the companies, his own included, are at home and well, but ‘Browne of the Boares head’<sup>7</sup> is dead, <sup>1</sup> Payments of 5*s.*, 2*l.* 10*s.*, and 3*l.* 10*s.* for the play Too Good to be True were made to Hen. Chettle, Rich. Hathway, and Wentworth Smith, 14 Nov., 1601, 6 and 7 Jan., 1601-2 (Diary, pp. 204, 206, 207).

<sup>3</sup> Appointed Master of the Revels, 24 July, 1579 (Malone, vol. iii. p. 57). He held the office till his death in Oct., 1610.

<sup>4</sup> Payments to the authors for all these plays, made in 1602, are entered in the Diary, p. 220, viz. the Bristol Tragedy, by J. Day; Tobias, by Hen. Chettle; Jephthah, by Anth. Munday and Thos. Dekker; Love parts Friendship, by H. Chettle and W. Smith; and Cardinal Wolsey, by H. Chettle. A fee of 7*s.* was paid to the Master of the Revels on the license for a new play (Diary, p. 118).

<sup>7</sup> Perhaps the famous Boar’s Head tavern in Eastcheap. The companies of the Earl of Oxford and the Earl of Worcester were playing there in 1602 (Index to the Remembrancia, 1878, p. 355). Henslowe, however, had an interest and dyed very pore'; her father [Henslowe] is at the Court, but she is of his own mind that he need not meet him at Basing; will not advise him as to his coming home, but longs to see him and thinks he may safely come; is glad to hear of his delight in hawking, and, although his clothes are worn to rags, he will be as welcome thus as in a cloth of gold or velvet; has paid 50s. rent for the wharf to the deputy of 'M<sup>r</sup> Woodward my Lordes bayly,' with a groat for the quittance claimed as the bailiff's fee,—if wrongly, they made her a simple woman; he shall receive a letter from the joiner himself and a printed bill; and so she ends, with commendations to himself, Mr. Chaloner<sup>1</sup> and his wife, praying God still to bless them both; 21 Oct., 1603.

f. 52.

With the postscript, partly lost owing to the decay of the paper at the bottom of the sheet:—

This letter was first printed by Mr. Collier (Memoirs of Edw. Alleyn, p. 62). Besides minor inaccuracies, however, the postscript, as there given, begins as follows:—‘Aboute a weeke agoe there came a youthe who said he was M<sup>r</sup> Frauncis Chaloner who would have borrowed x<sup>li</sup> to have bought things for * * * and said he was known unto you and M<sup>r</sup> Shakespeare of the globe, who came * * * said he knewe hym not, onely he herde of hym that he was a roge * * * so he was glade we did not lend him the monney * * * Richard Johnes [went] to seeke and inquire after the fellow,’ &c. This passage relating to Shakespeare is not to be found in the original, and could not possibly have formed part of it even in its perfect state, as is evident from the words and letters still legible. An exact copy of the whole letter, line for line, is given by Mr. Hamilton (Enquiry, p. 90), and the question is fully discussed by Dr. Ingleby (Shakspere Controversy, p. 279). Facsimiles of the defective part of the postscript are given in both these works, and also by Mr. J. O. Halliwell (Curiosities of Modern Shaksperian Criticism, 1853, p. 27).

This list, which includes the name 'Shaksp<sup>re</sup>', is written, with different ink and in a different hand, along the bottom edge of the sheet containing the above letter. It is not mentioned by Malone, who quotes the letter in his Enquiry into the Authenticity of Certain Papers, &c., 1796, p. 215; and it has been justly condemned as a modern forgery (Hamilton, Enquiry, p. 95; Ingleby, Shakspere Controversy, p. 269, facsimile ii. sheet xvi.).

The list includes fifty-one names in all, the highest assessment being that of Christopher Levenes, vi<sup>ii</sup>. Phil. Henslowe and Edw. Alleyn appear among the ‘Seasors’ (assessors), to whose names no amounts are attached. Among the names is ‘Mr. Gowghe, iii<sup>ii</sup>’—probably Rob. Gough, the actor, who is known to have lived in Southwark.

49. ‘A BREIF NOAT taken out of the poores booke contayning the names of all thenhabitantes of this Liberty [of the Clink], which arre rated and assesed to a weeklye paiment towardes the relief of the poore, as it standes now encreased this 6<sup>o</sup> day of Aprill, 1609. Deliuered vp to Phillip Henslowe Esquier, churchwarden, by Francis Carter, one of the late ouer-seers of the same Liberty.’ Two copies. ff. 70, 71.

First printed by Mr. Collier, Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 91.

The first of the two copies is a genuine document, but the line ‘Mr. Shakespeare——vi<sup>d</sup>’, at the head of the second division of the list of names, is undoubtedly a later insertion, the ink<sup>1</sup> being of a different colour and the letters betraying the forger by their studied, tremulous imitation of the original hand. Besides this, the sums opposite the next five names have apparently been altered by the prefix of a figure in each case, and the name ‘Leuens’ (the same, doubtless, as ‘Christofer Levenes’ in art. 48) has been changed into ‘Louens,’ in order to identify him with John Lowin, the actor. The second copy, which is written on what appears to be a fly leaf torn from a book having red edges, is an unquestionable forgery from beginning to end, perpetrated probably in order to support the falsification made in the genuine document. Mr. Collier prints the list from the first copy, as is proved by his quotation of its endorsement; but it is worthy of notice that his misreadings of names, such as Benfield for Binfeild,<sup>2</sup> Cevis for Cruis, Burkett for Buckett, and

Nasam for Nusam, show a tendency to agree with the second copy. It is apparently upon the evidence of the latter alone that the list has been hitherto condemned as a forgery. This opinion was first publicly expressed by Mr. Staunton (Shakespeare, 1858, vol. i. pp. xxxvii. lviii.), and subsequently, among others, by Dr. Ingleby (Shakspeare Controversy, 1861, p. 276); but neither of these writers seems to have known of the partly genuine document, which so strikingly exhibits the process of manipulation. Mr. Halliwell, on the other hand, does mention 'two contemporary copies,' not detecting the forgery, but his facsimile of the Shakespeare entry is taken only from the second (Folio Shakespeare, 1853, vol. i. p. 193). A complete facsimile of the same copy is given by Dr. Ingleby, sheet xvii.

50. '14 OF OCTOBER, 1609. An Accompt taken out of the poores booke for so much receyued and paid for the vse of the poore of this Liberty [of the Clink] in 27 weekes ended the day abouesaid. Under the first account the receipts amount to 31*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*, and the payments to 30*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*; and, under the other account 'for relief of the sicke,' the amounts are respectively 7*l.* 0*s.* 1*d.* and 10*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.* 'M<sup>r</sup> Henslowe' and 'M<sup>r</sup> [Roger] Cole' are mentioned apparently as churchwardens, and Thomas Toune (the actor) and Richard Watford as overseers, and the accounts are certified by Francis Carter.

70. AGREEMENT between Phillip Hinchlow, esq., and Robert Daborn, gent., for the delivery by the latter, before canorum, Brit. Mus., Add. MS. 24490, f. 56). Nathaniel, or more probably Nathan, Field was at the head of the Chapel Children in 1600, and finally became a member of the King's company. He was author of A Woman is a Weather-cock, 1612, and Amends for Ladies, 1618. There is a portrait of him at the Master's house at Dulwich in the collection bequeathed to the College by Will. Cartwright.

<sup>1</sup> Author of two extant plays, Christian Turn'd Turk, 1612, and the Poor Man's Comfort, 1655. In the preface to the former he states that his descent was 'not obscure, but generous,' and he probably belonged to the family of Daborne of Guildford, Surrey, a meagre pedigree of which is given in the Visitation of Surrey in 1621 (Harl. MS. 5830, f. 58*b*). At some time in his life he took orders, and became Chancellor of Waterford in 1619, Prebendary of Lismore in 1620, and Dean of Lismore in 1621, and died 23 Mar., 1627-8 (Cotton, Fasti Eccl. Hibern., 1851, vol. i. pp. 146, 167, 190). A sermon is extant, preached by him at Waterford in 1618.

the end of Easter term, of 'his Tragoedy cald Matchavill<sup>1</sup> and y<sup>e</sup> divill,' for 20*l.* in all, 6*l.* being already received, 'and must hav other four pound vpon delivery in of 3 acts and other ten povnd vpon delivery in of y<sup>e</sup> last scean perfited'; 17 April, 1613. f. 98.

71. BOND from Rob. Daborne, of the parish of St. Saviour, Southwark, gent., to Phil. Henslowe, of the same parish, in 20*l.*, to deliver 'one playe called Machivell and the divell vpon or before the last daie of Easter terme'; 17 April, 1613. Signed; with seal. Vellum. f. 99.

72. ROB. DABORNE to 'good Mr Hinchlow,' asking for a loan of 20*s.* towards bailing his man 'committed to newgate vpon taking a possession' for him; 25 April, 1613. With the note below:—'Lente Mr Daborne this money, wittnes Hugh Attwell.'<sup>2</sup> f. 100.

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 397; Alleyne Papers, p. 57.

73. ROB. DABORNE to Phil. Hinchlaw, asking for 'one 20<sup>s</sup> more of y<sup>e</sup> x<sup>l</sup>', and promising to deliver on Friday night the '3 acts fayr written,' and after to 'intend it speedyly,' if he will let him 'have pervsall of any other book'; 3 May, 1613. With acquittance below for 20*s.*, signed by Thomas More, 3 May, 1613. f. 101.

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 398; Alleyne Papers, p. 59.

<sup>1</sup> A play called Matchavell, or Machiavel, is mentioned in Henslowe's Diary as acted in 1592 (pp. 22, 24, 27). This may have been a recasting of it; but, as Mr. Collier remarks, the price was a large one even for a new play.

<sup>2</sup> See below, artt. 107, 110. He was one of the Children of the Revels in 1609, and belonged to Prince Charles's company at the time of his death on 25 Sept., 1621. Will. Rowley wrote an elegy on him, which is printed from a broadside by Mr. Collier (Hist. of Dram. Poetry, vol. i. p. 406).

74. ROB. DABORNE to Phil. Hinchlow: has sent some papers, though not so fairly written as he could wish, and intends to fulfil his promise, 'which, though it come not within compass of this term, shall come vpon y<sup>e</sup> neck of this new play they ar now studijng'; requests that the 10*l.*, of which he has had 9*l.*, may be made up, and will not fail, if he will 'appoyn特 any howr to read to M<sup>r</sup> Allin'; 8 May, 1613. With acquittance below for 20*s.*, signed by Thomas More, 8 May, 1613. f. 102.

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 399; Alleyne Papers, p. 60.

75. ROB. DABORNE to Phil. Hinchlow: most of his troubles being ended, has taken his wife home again; after Monday will 'intend y<sup>e</sup> busines carefully,' and on Tuesday night will meet him and 'M<sup>r</sup> Allin' and read part, but is unwilling to 'read to y<sup>e</sup> generall company till all be finisht'; is ashamed to press so much, but prays that 20*s.* more may be added to the 10*l.* he has already received; 16 May, 1613. With acquittance below from Garrett Leniaghe for 20*s.* f. 103.

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 399; Alleyne Papers, p. 60.

76. ROB. DABORNE to [Phil. Henslowe]: did think he 'deservd as much mony as M<sup>r</sup> Messenger,' though he forbore to urge it; but, now that occasions press so nearly, beseeches him to make their money even by letting him have 10*s.* more; [1613?]. With postscript:—'I pray, S<sup>r</sup>, let y<sup>e</sup> boy giv order this night to the stage keeper to set vp bills against Munday for Eastward Hoe<sup>1</sup> and one wendsday the new play.' f. 104.

<sup>1</sup> Comedy by G. Chapman, Ben Jonson, and J. Marston, 1605, acted by the Children of the Revels in Blackfriars. It was for reflecting upon the Scots in this piece that the authors were imprisoned; but it was afterwards so altered as to be acted at Court with approval (Collier, Hist. of Dram. Poetry, vol. iii. p. 463).

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 400; Alleyn Papers, p. 57.

78. ROB. DABORNE to Phil. Hinchlow: heard from the company he was expected yesterday 'to conclude about thear comming over or goinge to Oxford'; has not only laboured his own play, 'which shall be ready before they come over, but givn Cyrill Tourneur<sup>2</sup> an act of y<sup>e</sup> Arreignement<sup>3</sup> of London to write,' so as to have that also ready; has sent 'y<sup>e</sup> 2 sheets more fayr written,' and prays for 40*s.* to send to his counsel in a matter concerning his whole estate; 5 June, 1613. With acquittance below from Garred Leniaghe for 20*s.* f. 106.

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 397; Alleyn Papers, p. 58.

79. ROB. DABORNE to [Phil. Henslowe]: expected him on Monday; can 'this week deliver in y<sup>e</sup> last word and will y<sup>e</sup> night they play thear new play read this'; has sent a sheet and more, fairly written, and he may know there is not much behind; prays him, on account of the 'necessity of term busines,' to let him have 'y<sup>e</sup> other 20<sup>s</sup>' which he desired, and <sup>1</sup> Not Edw. Alleyn's brother, who died in 1596; but possibly the John Alleyn, son of the latter, whose name Alleyn entered in his pedigree in 1623. His name is frequently attached as a witness to the muniments below. See also MS. iii. art. 10.

<sup>2</sup> Author of the Revenge's Tragedy, 1607, and the Atheist's Tragedie, or the Honest Man's Revenge, 1611, both acted by the King's company at the Globe. He also wrote elegies on Prince Henry and Sir Fran. Vere. Another play by him, The Nobleman, was entered in the Stationers' Register, 15 Feb., 1611, and was one of the plays burnt by Warburton's servant. See Hunter, Chor. Vat. Angl., vol. v., Brit. Mus., Add. MS. 24491, f. 56b.

80. ROB. DABORNE to [Phil. Henslowe] : sat up last night till past twelve to write out the sheet sent, and would have delivered all, but had to go to the Common Pleas to acknowledge a fine ; prays for ‘40<sup>s</sup> in earnest of y<sup>e</sup> Arreighnment,’ and will meet him on Monday night ‘at y<sup>e</sup> new play and conclud farther’ ; 18 June, 1613. f. 108.

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 403; Alleyne Papers, p. 64.

81. ROB. DABORNE to Phil. Hinchlow : perceives that he thinks his tragedy will be behind, but has taken ‘extra-ordynary payns with the end and alterd one other scean in the third act, which they have now in parts’ ; if he will be paymaster, they shall have the ‘Arreighnment’ ; if not, let them try the tragedy first, and ‘as yt proves’ so deal with him, but he can get 25*l.* for it elsewhere ; prays him, if he ‘resolv to do this courtesy for y<sup>e</sup> company,’ to let him have 40*s.* more ‘till we seale’ ; 25 June, 1613. With the note below :—‘pade to M<sup>r</sup> Daborne xx<sup>s</sup>.’ f. 109.

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 404; Alleyne Papers, p. 64.

82. ROB. DABORNE to Phil. Hinchlow : asks, ‘of all ffryndship,’ for 20*s.*, the last he ‘will request till the play be fully by vs ended’ ; 16 July, 1613. With the note below :—‘dd. this xx<sup>s</sup> the 16 of July, 1613.’ f. 110.

Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 402; Alleyne Papers, p. 62.

83. ROB. DABORNE to Phil. Hinchlow : wrote to [Edward] Griffyn [the scrivener] requesting his [Henslowe’s] answer and end to ‘those businesses and debts’ between them ; wishes him either to be paymaster for another play or to take back 10*l.* of what they have had and security for the rest ; his necessities are so urgent, till he has sold his estate, that he must resort to other means if Henslowe will not lend him 20*s.* until Thursday, when they deliver in the play ; the receipt sent 'by the waterman at the cardinall's hatt' or the present letter shall be security ; 30 July, 1613. Printed, Malone, vol. xxi. p. 416; Alleyne Papers, p. 78. Mr. Collier, the editor of the latter work, takes his copy from Malone, stating that the original is 'not now found at Dulwich,' an error which he repeats in his Hist. of Dram. Poetry, ed. 1879, vol. i. p. 375. The printed version contains a number of slight inaccuracies in spelling, &c., together with the more serious misreadings '50*l*' and '40*l*' for '50*s*' and '40*s*' (paragr. 7), 'likewise Mr Field' for 'because Mr Feild' (paragr. 8), and 'enter and' for 'enter bond' (paragr. 15).

<sup>1</sup> The writer was evidently husband of ‘Haris Joones,’ the writer of the letter following. Probably, therefore, he was Richard Jones, the actor, whose name has already occurred; the more so as the handwriting has a resemblance to that of art. 8 and the signature of art. 2. Henslowe being still alive, or his death not yet known to the writer, the date can hardly be later than 1616; and it is not unlikely that Richard Jones, who had already acted in Germany, was a member of the English company which is known to have been at Danzig in that year (Cohn, Shakespeare in Germany, 1865, p. xcii.). His name occurs in none of the lists of actors in Fleay’s Shakespeare Manual later than 1600, and in Henslowe’s Diary, p. 219, is an entry of a loan of 50*l.* ‘unto the company to geve unto M<sup>r</sup> Jonnes and M<sup>r</sup> Shaw at ther goinge a waye’ in Feb., 1601-2.

113. ACQUITTANCE from William Gore to Mathias Alleyn, Master of Dulwich College, for 11s., for his pains in perusing a license in mortmain, whereby it appeared that Edw Alleyn 'was in his liefe tyme seized of a messuage called the Fortune,' and that he 'disposed of the same to charitable vses'; 8 Nov., 1632. f. 162.

114. 'A CIRTIFFICATE vnder y<sup>e</sup> hands of the courte of assistants [of Dulwich College] to y<sup>e</sup> Lord Keeper for rente due by the Fortune tennauntes,' stating that at Michaelmas the arrears of rent for the theatre will amount to 164*l.* 14*s.* 3*3d.*, and that, in consequence, the College is compelled to 'take moneys vp at interest to supplie their wantes and relief of the poore of the said colledge'; 4 Sept., 1637. Signed by Mathias Alleyn, master, Thomas Alleyn, warden, and ten others. f. 163.

Printed, Alleyn Papers, p. 95.

115. BILL IN CHANCERY preferred by Dulwich College against Margaret Gray, Edward Marrant, and John Roods for the non-payment of rent upon leases of the Fortune Theatre, with the answers of the defendants; Nov., 1637. f. 165.

It appears from their answers that Marrant and Roods were assignees of leases (see below, Munn. 56–58, 63, 66–70) originally granted by Edw. Alleyn to Charles Masseye, the actor, John Fisher, Thomas Wiggett, and Richard Gannill. Masseye is mentioned as dead before 6 Dec., 1635, leaving a widow, Elianor. The answer of the defendants concludes:—

'And they paid their rents vntill Christmas which was 12 monthe, which was Christmas 1635, and then the kinge to hinder the increase of the Plague did forbid Theaters in and about London, for to hinder concurse of people. And soe, acteing of playes being the way to rayse the rent (and for-biden), the defendants haue not euer since bene able, nor are chargeable as they conceiue, to pay rents, they being alsoe inhibited for imployeing the premises to any other vse then for playes.'

116. LICENSE from the master, warden, &c., of Dulwich College for the assignment to Tobyas Lisley of leases of the 'Fortune Playhowse' granted by Edw. Alleyn and lately held by Mary Bryant, Thomas Robinson, Edward Jackson, Thomas Blomfeild, and Margaret Gray; 15 July, 1639. Signed by Mathias Alleyn, master, Thomas Alleyn, warden, and four others. f. 171.

117. ACQUITTANCE from the master, warden, &c., of Dulwich College to Tobias Lisle, grocer, for 50*l.*, in full discharge of 55*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.* due for arrears of rent [see below, Munn. 66, 67] on a lease of 'a parte and an half parte in twelue partes to be devided of the Fortune playhowse'; 22 July, 1639. Signed by Mathias Alleyn, Thomas Alleyn, and three others. f. 173.

118. PETITION from Dulwich College to Sir Edward Littleton, Lord Keeper, against John Beale [assignee of a lease from Edw. Alleyn to Edw. Jacson] and other tenants of the Fortune play-house, who are in arrear with their rent to the amount of 104*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*; with an order by the Lord Keeper for a hearing, dat. 9 Feb., 1640[1]. Copies. f. 175.

From this petition it appears that the cause above (art. 115) was heard 26 Jan., 1639, and order made 'that the said tennauntes should pay all their rent in arreare without any abatement, which accordingly they did either compound for and pay for a certaine tyme,' but had again fallen in arrear.

Printed, Alleyn Papers, p. 96.

119. BILL IN CHANCERY by Dulwich College against John Beale, assignee of a lease of a twelfth part of the Fortune play-house, to compel him to pay arrears of rent, to keep the premises in repair, and to surrender the counterpart of the lease, followed by the defendant's answer and proofs for the plaintiffs; Hilary term, 15 Chas. I. [1640]. Copies, as brief for counsel. f. 177.

Beale in his answer alleges that he had paid all rent due up to a certain date, but that the master and warden would not sign the acquittances; also that by the terms of the lease he was bound to pay rent to the heirs of Edw. Alleyn, no mention being made of the plaintiffs.

120. ORDER OF COURT in a suit between Margaret Grey, plaintiff, and Matthias Allen, Thomas Allen, and Tobias Lisle, defendants, to the effect that, in accordance with a former decree, the plaintiff shall pay the rents [on a lease of shares in the Fortune play-house] and receive the profits; 9 July, 17 Chas. I. [1641]. f. 181.

121. ORDERS OF COURT and other papers in a suit between Tobias Lisle and Dulwich College [see below, Mun. 66], ending in the dismissal of the plaintiff's bill for relief 'against accions brought by the defendants for 66*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.* arrerages of rent reserved vpon leases of certaine shares of the Fortune playehowse'; 28 Nov., 21 Chas. I. [1645]-26 Nov., 22 Chas. I. [1646]. f. 183.

122. ORDERS OF COURT, &c., in a suit between Dulwich College and Tobias Lisle, Thomas Grimes, John Rhodes, and others [see below, Munn. 67-69] relative to arrears of rent on leases of the 'Fortune,' ending with an order that 'the matters be refferred to one or more tryalles at lawe'; 16 Oct., 23 Chas. I. [1647]-24 Nov., 1649. f. 206.

123. ORDER OF COURT, allowing the plea and demurrer of Thomas Allen and Ralph Allen, master and warden of Dulwich College, defendants in a suit with John Rhodes; 1 Feb., 1649[50]. f. 223.

124. REPORT of Edward Jerman and John Tanner, 'being desired by y<sup>e</sup> Mr and Warden of Dulwich Colledg to

125. ORDER of the Court of Assistants of Dulwich College for the lease of 'the Fortune playhouse and ground therevnto belonging,' the same having 'for diuers yeares last past laine void and yeilded noe rent but bene a great losse to y<sup>e</sup> Colledge,' and being 'at present soe ruinous y<sup>t</sup> parte thereof is already fallen downe and y<sup>e</sup> rest will suddainly follow'; 5 Mar., 1659[60]. Signed by Thomas Alleyne, Ralph Alleyne, and ten others. f. 227.

126. ORDER of the same for the sale of the materials of the Fortune play-house, in consequence of their inability to find a tenant under the order of 5 Mar., 1659-60, notwithstanding their 'vtmost endeauours . . . by posting of bills in the Citie of London and putting it into the newes booke,<sup>1</sup> &c.; 4 Mar., 1660[1]. Signed by Thomas Alleyne, Ralph Alleyne, and ten others. f. 229.

<sup>1</sup> An advertisement that 'the Fortune play-house . . . with the ground thereto belonging, is to be let to be built upon, where twenty-three tenements may be erected, with gardens, and a street may be cut through for the better accommodation of the building,' was inserted in the Mercurius Politicus of 14-21 Feb., 1661 (Lyson's Environs, vol. i. p. 104; Collier, Hist. of Dram. Poetry, vol. iii. p. 122).

127. MEMORANDUM of a contract for the purchase by William Beaven from Dulwich College of the materials of the Fortune play-house for 75*l.*, and of the ground both on the north and south side at the rate of 2*s.* 6*d.* for 'each foote running measure'; 16 Mar., 1660[1]. f. 231.

128. ACQUITTANCE from Dulwich College to William Beaven, of London, tiler and bricklayer, for 50*l.*, 'in full payment for the materialls of the late demolished Fortune playhowse'; 8 July, 1661. Copy. f. 232.

129. MEMORANDUM for a lease from Dulwich College to William Beaven, for 45 years, at a rent of 34*l.* 10*s.*, of the ground 'whereon the late demolished playhowse called the Fortune was erected,' together with tenements, &c., built or to be built by him upon the same and in Golden Lane; 24 July, 1661. f. 234.

130. ACQUITTANCE from Dulwich College to Will.
Beaven for 10*l.* for the materials of two tenements in Golden
Lane, the one being 'over the gateway leading to y<sup>e</sup> late Fortune playhowse' and the other 'knowne by the name of the Kings head'; 26 July, 1661. Copy. f. 236.

131. BILL IN CHANCERY of Will. Beaven against Dulwich College [see below, Mun. 71] for non-fulfilment of an agreement to grant him a building lease for 45 years of the site of 'y<sup>e</sup> Fortune . . . heretofore vsed for a playhouse for actinge of publique enterludes and stage playes,' with the answer of the College, alleging an ordinance of the Founder forbidding a lease to be made for more than 21 years; [Nov., 1661]. Drafts. f. 238.

132. DECREE IN CHANCERY empowering Dulwich

College to grant to Will. Beaven a lease as below; 21 Nov., 13 Chas. II. [1661]. Copy. f. 252.

133. ORDER of the Court of Assistants of Dulwich College for a lease to Will. Beaven, for 21 years, with renewals for 21 years and for 3 years, at the rent of 34*l.* 10*s.*, of all messuages, &c., erected by him on ground which was in part the site of the Fortune play-house, now 'totally demolished'; 4 Mar., 1661[2]. Copy. f. 256. For a draft of the lease see below, Mun. 72.

134. ACQUITTANCE from Dulwich College to Will. Beaven for 34*l.* 10*s.* for a year's rent of tenements on ground in part the site of 'the late demolished Fortune playhouse,' and 3*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* for other tenements in 'Goulding Lane'; 28 July, 1662. Copy. f. 257.

135. A TRANSLATION in verse, in the hand of Ben Jonson, of Martial's epigram<sup>1</sup> 'Vitam quæ faciunt beatiorem,' lib. x. 47, beginning, 'The things that make the happier life are these.' f. 259.

Printed, for the first time, from this copy by Mr. Collier, Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 54, and reprinted, Gifford, Works of Ben Jonson, ed. 1875, vol. ix. p. 345.

136. A COPY, in the hand of Ben Jonson, of Sir Henry Wotton's poem<sup>2</sup> 'How happy is he born and taught.' On the same sheet as the preceding. f. 259.

Printed from this copy, Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 53. Mr. Collier, however, does not print the lines, as he says, 'exactly in the form in which they stand in the manuscript,' but with the following misread-

137. POEM, in four six-line stanzas, addressed 'to his deservedlie honored frend Mr Edward Allane, the first founder and Master of the Colledge of God's gift,' in the hand of, and signed by, 'W. Alexander.'<sup>1</sup> f. 260.

Printed, for the first time, from this copy, Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 178.

138. COPY of the part of Orlando in Robert Greene's Historie of Orlando Furioso,<sup>2</sup> probably played by Edw. Alleyn. Imperfect, the paper being in places much decayed and worm-eaten; written on slips, originally pasted together so as to form a long roll, six inches wide. f. 261.

Printed, Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 198. See also Dyce, Works of R. Greene, 1861, p. 31.

139. A DRAMATIC DIALOGUE, probably played as an interlude, with stage directions. This and the following articles are written in different hands of the end of the 16th and beginning of the 17th centt. f. 272.

Printed, with great freedom, Alleyn Papers, p. 8.

The text, which forms Mr. Collier's first four stanzas, is in the original as follows:—

'Seest thou not yon farmers sonn? He hath stolne my love

<sup>1</sup> Sir Will. Alexander, of Menstrie, author of the Monarchicke Tragedies, 1603-1607, Domesday, 1614, and other poems. He was made Secretary of State for Scotland 1626, Viscount Stirling 1630, and Earl of Stirling 1633, and died 12 Feb., 1640.

<sup>2</sup> Entered in Henslowe's Diary, p. 21, as acted by Lord Strange's company on 21 Feb., 1591-2; but it is not marked as a new play. It was first printed in 1594 (see Collier, Hist. of Dram. Poetry, vol. ii. p. 529).

frome me, alas ! What shall I doe ? I am vndonn ; my hart will neer be as it was. Oh, but he gives her gay gold rings, and tufted gloves to were vppon a holly day, and many other goodly things, that hath stolne my love away.

‘ Frend. Lett him give her gaie gold rings, or stufted gloves : were they nere so sweete, my boy, or were her lovers lords or kings, they should not cary the wench away. Oh, but a daunces wondres well, and with his daunce stolne away her love from me ; yett she was wont to say I bore away the bell for daunsing and for courtisie [daunsing].

‘ Jack. Fie, lusty yonker, what doe you heer, that you are not all a daunsing on the greene to day ? We feare perce the farmer’s sonn is lik to carry your wench away. Good dick, bid them all com hether, and tell perce from me beside, that if he think to haue the wench, heer he stands shall lie with the bride.

‘ W[ench] Fre[nd]. Fy, nan, fie, willt then forsake thee olde lover for any other newcom guest ? Thou long time his love did know and whie shouldst thou now vse him soe ? Whie, bony Dicky, I will not forsake my bony rowland for any gold ; if he can daunce as well as perce, he shall have my hart in hold.’

On the back is written ‘ Kitt Marlowe,’ in a later, and perhaps modern, hand.

140. SEVEN STANZAS in praise of tailors. f. 273.

The first stanza is :—

‘ You peu[i]sh foolles of poeitrey,
That seakes for to desgrace
The tayler and the tayleres lades
That weare within this place.’

Printed, Alleyn Papers, p. 13, with considerable changes in the spelling.

141. DIALOGUE ON LOVE between a man and a boy, in eleven stanzas. f. 274.

The first stanza is :—

‘ Man. It fell vpon a sollem holledaye
· Boye. Woe me that the daye should be termed holey

Man. When idell wittes had gotten leaue to play
Boye. Such play ill please the mind thates weand from folly.'

Printed, Alleyn Papers, p. 29, with corrections in the spelling ; but st. 3, for 'state' read 'pompe' ; st. 6, for 'in curls' read 'icimt,' i.e. 'ikempt' ; and st. 11, for 'ones yerely' read 'one yerth,' i.e.
 'on earth.'

143. POEM of a jealous husband outwitted, in about twenty-one six-line stanzas. Very imperfect, owing to the decay of the paper. f. 276.

The first stanza is :—

‘A neighbour mine not long ago there was,
But namelesse he for blamelesse he shalle bee,
That maried had a tricke and bonny lasse
As in a sommer day a man might see ;
But he himselfe a foyle vnhandsome groome,
And farre vnfit to hould so good a roome.’

144. LOOSE AND HUMOROUS VERSES, nearly covering the two sides of a sheet much decayed and mutilated. f. 278.

The first lines are severally as follows :—

‘When golden dayes be [past]’
‘Kiss my cheek and chine, boy, but presume no nieyr’
‘An owld man a woing made bragge off his doinge’
‘Zounds I ame y<sup>e</sup> roring boy thatts newly come to towne’
‘Com hobling Gobling grisly ghoast.’

On the back is a fragmentary note in the hand of Edw. Alleyn, apparently the beginning of a clause in a will.

<sup>3</sup> Admitted usher of the College on 20 Dec., 1617, but 'gon' on 28 Sept., 1620 (Register, MS. x. ff. 6*b*, 11*b*). His wife was Anne Alleyn, daughter of Edward Alleyn, the Founder's cousin (see below, art. 109). The last payment of wages to her, recorded in the Founder's Diary, was on 24 June, 1620; and on 3 Oct. is the entry, 'This daye Nan Allen went away, given her 1*l*. 2*s*.' He left her 20*l.* in his will (Alleyn Papers, p. xxiv.).

of London, and his son, Edw. Alleyn, the testator's godson, shall be surgeons to Dulwich College for life. f. 129.

The letter is printed, but with some inaccuracies, in the Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 143. Mr. Collier also prints, as belonging to the same letter, a passage in which Alleyn replies to some alleged taunts of Sir Fran. Calton with regard to his having been a player. Mr. Collier says (p. 146) that this passage is written on a loose slip, marked with an asterisk; but the slip (if it ever existed) is no longer to be found.

commending Henry Petty for 'a rome vacant for a poore aged man'; Southwark, 24 Jan., 1624[5]. f. 145.

Below and on the three blank pages at the back is the draft of a long letter from Edw. Alleyn to Dr. John Donne, father of his second (or third) wife, Constance, complaining of his 'manie vnkind passages,' and especially the 'vnkind vnexspeckted and vndeserved deniall of y<sup>e</sup> comon curtesie afforded to a frend, I mean y<sup>e</sup> loane of vnvsefull moneys.' This letter has no date or address, but it was written 'allmost 5 quarters sinc our maryag,'<sup>1</sup> which took place on 3 Dec., 1623 (Alleyn Papers, p. xx.). It has been printed in full by Mr. Collier (Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 173), but with numerous inaccuracies. In his remarks upon it Mr. Collier observes, 'Here also we find it distinctly stated by Alleyn, that a portion of his property was the playhouse in the Blackfriars.' This is not the case. The passage to which he refers runs as follows:—'I then towld you all my landes wear stated [i.e. settled] on y<sup>e</sup> Coll: 3 leases I had, one off them wase giuen to y<sup>e</sup> Coll: y<sup>e</sup> other 2 being y<sup>e</sup> manor and rectory off Lewsham<sup>2</sup> worth 130<sup>l</sup> a year, and diuer tenementes in y<sup>e</sup> black fryars, as the plaiehowse theare, worth 120<sup>l</sup> y<sup>e</sup> year, boath which cost me 2500<sup>l</sup>.' The words in italics, however, were certainly not written by Alleyn, but they have been inserted between the lines evidently by the same hand to which are due the forgeries noticed above in MS. i., and below in MSS. vii. ix.

103. SIR THOMAS GRYMES to Edw. Alleyn:—'Sr, The last night meeting you vpon the highe waye you tould me you might haue iic<sup>ll</sup> vpon your bond and myne. ## MS. No. VII.

DIARY and Account-Book of Philip Henslowe; 1592-1609.

The bulk of the contents relate to the Rose, the Fortune, and other theatrical companies in which Henslowe was interested. Among other valuable matter are included lists of pieces acted, noting the daily receipts and first performances, transactions with and payments to authors and actors, and disbursements for the building of the Fortune Theatre and for repairs, theatrical properties, &c.

The entries are generally made by Henslowe himself; but in various places occur the handwritings, with signatures, of the dramatists George Chapman, Henry Chettle, John Day, Thomas Dekker, Michael Drayton, Richard Hathway, William Haughton, Henry Porter, William Rankins, Samuel Rowley, Anthony Wadeson, and Robert Wilson, together with those of a large number of actors. Mention is also made of Thomas Heywood, Ben Jonson, John Marston, Thomas Middleton, Anthony Munday, Thomas Nash, Wentworth Smith, and John Webster.

Interspersed are various accounts unconnected with the stage, relating to private and family business, advances made on pledges, and the cutting of wood in Ashdown Forest,<sup>1</sup> co.

<sup>1</sup> See a paper on Ashdown Forest by Rev. Edw. Turner in the Sussex Archaeological Society's Collections, vol. xiv., 1862, pp. 47, 51, where Edmond Hensley, or Henslowe, of Lindfield, father of Philip Henslowe, is named as master of the game in Ashdown Forest and Broil Park in 1539 and 1556-7.

Sussex. The last-named accounts are at the end, reversing the volume, and belong to the years 1577 and 1578.

Extracts are given by Malone, Shakspeare, 1790, vol. i. part ii. p. 288 (ed. Boswell, 1821, vol. iii. p. 295); and the whole volume, so far as it relates to the stage, has been edited by Mr. J. Payne Collier, The Diary of Philip Henslowe, Shakespeare Society, 1845.

Mr. Collier, however, has accidentally omitted to print a bond (f. 102) from William Paschall, of Maplestead, co. Essex, esq. (cf. ed. Collier, p. 192), to Phil. Henslowe for the payment on 1 Nov. of 10*l.*, dat. 28 Sept., 1599. He has also overlooked the following entry (f. 236):—

'Layd owt for my Lorde Admeralle seruantes<sup>1</sup> as foloweth, 1594.

Layd owt for gowinge and cominge to somerset howe

Layd owt at another time for drinckinge . . . .	xii <sup>d</sup>
Layd owt goinge vp and downe to corte twise . . . .	I <sup>s</sup> 4 <sup>d</sup>

N.B. The following entries may without hesitation be condemned as forgeries:—

I. f. 11b. '18 of Maye 1595—R at galfrido & Bernardo—xxxis.'

This is written at the very bottom of the page in a style of hand which appears nowhere else in the volume. The entry is printed by Mr. Collier (Diary, p. 52), with the note:—'An entry omitted to be noticed by Malone. It relates to a play founded, doubtless, upon the recently-discovered poem by John Drout, entitled "The pityfull Historie of two loving

Italians, Gaulfrido and Bernardo le Vayne," printed in 1570 by Henry Binneman. . . . An impression, limited to twenty-five copies, has been recently made from the original.<sup>1</sup> The re-print gives neither the name of the possessor of the original nor that of the editor; but from the handwriting of an inscription in the British Museum copy it may be inferred that the editor was Mr. Collier himself.

Mr. Collier does not remark in his note that the 18 May, 1595, was a Sunday. This fact, however, added to the suspicious appearance of the entry, is significant; for, although in other parts of the volume there is some confusion in the dates, the accounts for the season from Easter to the end of June, 1595, are very regularly kept, and there is no other instance of a Sunday performance.

II. f. 19b. 'Pd vnto Thomas Dickers the 20 of desembr 1597 for adycyons to ffostus twentie shellinges and fyve shellinges more for a prolog to Marloes tambelan, so in all I saye payde twentye fyve shellinges.'

Mr. Collier prints this entry (Diary, p. 71) without comment; but in his Hist. of Dramatic Poetry (ed. 1831, vol. iii. p. 113; ed. 1879, vol. ii. p. 491) he refers to it in the following terms:—

'There are three pieces of evidence to show that Marlow was the author of Tamburlaine the Great, two of which have never yet been noticed. The most conclusive is the subsequent entry in Henslowe's MS. Diary, preserved at Dulwich College, which escaped the notice of Malone. . . . Here we see Marlow's Tamburlaine mentioned in connection with his Faustus, to the latter of which Dekker had made some additions, and written a new prologue for the former. . . . This testimony may be considered decisive.'

So far from being decisive the testimony is worthless, since the whole entry is evidently a forgery, written in clumsy imitation of Henslowe's hand. The forger, however, has shown some skill in his treatment of a narrow blot or smudge which intersects the upper part of the 'll' in the second 'shellinges'; for, in order that the writing may appear to be under, and not over, the old blot, he has at first carried up the ll (as if writing u) only as far as the lower edge of the blot, and has then started again from the upper edge to make the loops.

III. f. 29b. 'Lent the 14 May 1597 to Jubie vpon a notte from Nashe twentie shellinges more for the Jylle [Isle] of dogges, w<sup>ch</sup> he is wrytinge for the company.'

f. 33. 'Pd this 23 of aguste 1597 to Harey Porter to carye to T. Nashe nowe at this tyme in the flete for wrytinge of the eylle of dogges ten } shellings, to be paid agen to me when he canne, I } saye ten shillinges

f. 33b. 'Pd vnto Mr Blunsones the M<sup>r</sup> of the Revelles man this 27 of Aguste 1597 ten shellinges for } newes of the restraynte beinge recaled by the lordes of } the Queenes counsel }

Mr. Collier, in a note to the second of these entries (Diary, pp. 94, 98, 99), refers to his Hist. of Dram. Poetry, where (ed. 1831, vol. i. p. 306; ed. 1879, vol. i. p. 294) they are thus introduced :—

'We find Nash in May 1597 writing for the Lord Admiral's players, then under Philip Henslowe, and producing for them a play called The Isle of Dogs, which is connected with an important circumstance in the history of the stage, viz. the temporary silencing of that company, in consequence of the very piece of which Nash was the author.'

The following singular particulars are extracted from the Diary kept by Henslowe. . . . Malone published none of them.'

All three entries are written by the same hand as No. II., the ink being plainly doctored to give it a fictitious appearance of age. Immediately above the first entry a slip of paper, the whole width of the page, has been cut out, upon which the same words had previously been written. This is evident from an examination of the edges above and below the excision, on which may still be seen the top of the L in the first line and the bottoms of the long strokes in the last line,<sup>1</sup> corresponding exactly with the letters in the entry below. It may be inferred from this that the first attempt at the forgery was a failure, though it is possible, of course, to argue that the duplicate was cut out to send to Nash. It should be added that four similar excisions have been made (possibly for the same reason) between the first and second entries.

IV. f. 94. 'Lent vnto W<sup>m</sup> Jube the 3 of November
1601 to bye stamell clatthe for a clocke for the gwissem
— Webster

Mr. Collier in his note (Diary, p. 202) says, 'The name of Webster is interlined, perhaps in a different hand.' He quotes the entry also in his Hist. of Dram. Poetry (ed. 1831, vol. iii. p. 101; ed. 1879, vol. ii. p. 482), adding that it 'sufficiently connects Webster with the performance, which we may conjecture was a new version of Marlow's tragedy.' There can be no doubt whatever that the name was not written by the same hand as the rest of the entry; and it is equally evident that it is a spurious modern addition.

V. f. 116. 'Lent vnto Harey Chettell the 7 of September 1602 at the apoyntment to lend in eare-

'Lent vnto Harey Chettell the 9 of September

Mr. Collier in his note (Diary, p. 239) observes that 'Malone takes no notice of these remarkable entries.' The probable reason of this omission (which is the more significant as he does notice the other plays mentioned on the same page) is that in Malone's time the entries remained in the state in which Henslowe left them, viz. with a blank space for the title of the projected tragedy, as in another entry on the next page (ed. Collier, p. 241). This space in both instances is now filled in with the title printed above in italics, written with a different ink and in a hand which has all the appearance of forgery. Besides this, the word 'tragedie' in both entries has been blotted out, as unsuited to the title inserted, and 'in the second entry the word 'playe' has been written over it. Mr. Collier notices this correction; but he does not mention that the title is an insertion.

The volume has been mutilated in various places by the cutting or tearing out of leaves in whole or in part. In some cases the mutilation dates apparently from Henslowe's own time, but much of it is probably of a later period. All the leaves have now been repaired, and the excisions filled in with blank paper. The original vellum covers, which are partly covered with names and other scribbling, are now bound up at the beginning as fly-leaves.

A narrow slip, evidently cut from this volume, was bought for the British Museum at a public sale in 1878, and is now numbered Additional MS. 30262, f. 66. It contains, on the two sides, the following entries :—

‘ Receaued by me George Chapman for a Pastorall ending in a Tragedye<sup>1</sup> in part of payment the sum of fortye shillinges, this xviith of July anno 1599.

‘ By me George Chapman.’

‘ 1 August, 1599. Receaued by mee Thomas Dekker at the hands of M<sup>r</sup> Phillip Hynchlow the some of twenty shillings<sup>2</sup> to bee payd the last of this moneth.

‘ Thomas Dekker.’

<sup>1</sup> The same payment is entered by Henslowe in the Diary, f. 63<sup>b</sup> (ed. Collier, p. 154), ‘in earneste of a pastrall tragedie.’

MS. No. VIII.

MEMORANDUM-BOOK of Edward Alleyn ; 1594-1616.

The contents, which occupy a small portion only of the volume, consist chiefly of notes of the purchase of the Bear Garden, the Fortune Theatre, Dulwich manor, and other properties, with lists of 'evidences' and particulars of price, subsequent profits, &c. On f. 41<sup>b</sup> is 'a generall note of all my writings, deedes or evidencis, bondes or bills belonging to me E. Alleyn.'

All these notes, the lists of 'evidences' excepted, are printed in Mr. J. Payne Collier's introduction to the Alleyn Papers, Shakespeare Society, 1843, p. xiii. The note, 'What the Fortune cost me, Nov. 1599,' &c., f. 6<sup>b</sup>, is also given by Malone, Shakspeare, ed. Boswell, 1821, vol. iii. p. 55, and by Collier, Hist. of Dram. Poetry, ed. 1879, vol. iii. 119. See also above, MS. i. art. 43<sup>n</sup>, and MS. ii. art. 4<sup>n</sup>. Most of the evidences are included among the muniments catalogued below.

At the beginning of the volume are four acquittances from Edw. Alleyn to Arthur Langworth for payments on a statute-staple bond, 19 May, 1599-20 Nov., 1600; and at the end, reversing the volume, are a number of medical recipes.

Small octavo, ff. 62.

<sup>2</sup> Joyce, widow of Sir Robert Clarke, Baron of the Exchequer, who died 1 Jan., 1606-7. By a former husband, James Austen or Austin, who died in 1602 (Stow, Survey of London, ed. Strype, 1754, vol. i. p. 704), she was mother of William Austin, the same doubtless as the 'M<sup>r</sup> Austein' here mentioned and the William Austin, of St. Saviour's, Southwark, in Muniments 586-589. She died, aged 66, in 1626, and was buried in St. Saviour's church, where there is a monument to her memory. From the frequency of Alleyn's visits to her, she appears to have been one of his most intimate friends.

<sup>4</sup> The same doubtless as the Matthew Roydon to whom Alleyn gave 6d. on 15 Aug., 1622 (see below). A poet of this name is mentioned in very good company by Meres (Wit's Treasury, 1598, f. 282b). He was author of an elegy on Sir Phil. Sidney, printed in the Phanix Nest, 1593, and in Spenser's Colin Clout, 1595, and has commendatory verses before Tho. Watson's Passionate Centurie, 1582. Chapman dedicated to him his Shadow of Night, 1594, and Ovid's Banquet of Sence, 1595.

<sup>6</sup> The 25 Oct., 1618, and the 22 Oct., 1620, are also noted by Alleyn as the anniversary of his wedding day. He was married on 22 Oct., 1592 (see above, p. 6, n. 1).

<sup>2</sup> Marc Antonio de Dominis, a Jesuit, Bishop of Segni and Archbishop of Spalatro; turned Protestant and came to England in 1616; made Dean of Windsor 13 May, 1618; returned to Italy and was reconciled to the Church of Rome in 1622; died 1624. The first volume of his De Republica Ecclesiastica appeared in this year, but the book bought by Alleyn must have been one of his many controversial pamphlets.

<sup>4</sup> Sir Edmond Bowyer, of Camberwell, sheriff of Surrey and Sussex, 1600; knighted 11 May, 1603; M.P. for Surrey, 1603; buried in Camberwell church 12 March, 1626-7.

<sup>3</sup> Thomas Howard, Earl of Arundel (MS. iii., above, art. 68). 'His statues [were] equal in number, value and antiquity to those in the houses of most princes; to gain which he had persons many years employed both in Italy, Greece, and so generally in any part of Europe where rarities were to be had. His paintings likewise were numerous and of the most excellent masters' (Sir Edw. Walker, Life of Tho. Howard, Earl of Arundel, 1651, in Historical Discourses, 1705, p. 220). The Arundel marbles, now at Oxford, were purchased by him later, in 1622.

<sup>4</sup> Francis Bacon, Lord Verulam. On the next day, 18 Aug., Bacon wrote to Buckingham to explain his reason for staying the patent:—‘I like well that Allen playeth the last act of his life so well; but, if his Majesty give way thus to amortize his tenures, his Court of Wards shall decay, which I had well hoped should improve.’ He suggested, therefore, that the proposed endowment of 800*l.* should be reduced to 500*l.* See Spedding, Life, vol. vi. 1872, p. 324.

<sup>5</sup> The words in italics are interlined, and are evidently a modern forgery. Mr. J. P. Collier prints the entry (Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 106), but without the spurious addition. The threatened demolition was evidently in connexion with the proclamations issued about this time in restraint of new buildings, in pursuance of the statute 35 Eliz. cap. 6, 1593. This Act prohibited the erection of any new building within three miles of London or Westminster, as well as the conversion of any single existing building into several tenements. It was used in <sup>3</sup> The word 'theatre' is interlined, and is a forgery. The object of the forger, both in this case and in that above (p. 172, n. 5), is to make it appear that Alleyn's property in the Blackfriars included the Blackfriars Theatre, and, by inference, that he had bought Shakespeare's interest. <sup>1</sup> Probably Joseph Taylor, the actor (MS. i., above, art. 107). John Taylor, the water-poet, who is mentioned below, did not reach London on his return from Scotland till 15 Oct.

<sup>2</sup> The words 'saw Romeo' are interlined, and are a forgery. The imitation of a 17th cent. hand was not successful, and an attempt has consequently been made to erase the words.

<sup>1</sup> Mr. Collier (Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 155) spoils an interesting entry by misreading the amount as 4*d.*, a sum which applies to the entry preceding. Taylor published an account of this journey, in mixed prose and verse, with the title The Pennyles Pilgrimage, or the Moneylesse Perambulation of John Taylor alias the Kings Majesties Water-poet. How he travailed on foot from London to Edenborough in Scotland, not carrying any money to or fro, neither begging borrowing or asking meate drinke or lodging, &c., London, 1618. This was followed by A Kicksey Winsey or a Lerry Come-twang, wherein John Taylor hath satirically suited 800 of his bad debtors that will not pay him for his return of Journey from Scotland, London, 1619. He here says that he had sixteen hundred and fifty subscribers to the former work:—

' They took a book worth 12 pence, and were bound
To give a crown, an angel or a pound,
A noble, piece or half-piece, what they list;
They passed their words or freely set their fist.'

Alleyn's subscription seems to have been duly paid; but the book is no longer in the College library.

<sup>3</sup> Particulars of the fire are given in letters of J. Chamberlain and T. Lorkin, 16 and 19 Jan., 1618-9 (Court and Times of James I. vol. ii. pp. 123, 126); and another account is contained in a news-letter in Cotton MS. Titus, B. viii. f. 374. It was caused by the carelessness of a workman, who was employed in making preparations for a royal masque; and, within two hours, the Banqueting Hall was completely destroyed. The damage extended also to the offices of the Signet and Privy Seal under the Hall, and nearly the whole of the records and papers are said to have been burnt.

<sup>2</sup> After 'M<sup>r</sup>' a blank space was left by Alleyn, as in other instances when he had forgotten the name of a chance visitor. This space has been filled up with the name 'B. Jonson' by another hand. The addition is certainly spurious, and seems to have been made since the publication of Mr. Collier's Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, 1841, in which it is stated (p. 154) that Ben Jonson's name does not appear among Alleyn's guests at Dulwich.

<sup>2</sup> Edmond Howes, who was present, gives an account of the ceremony in his continuation of Stow's Chronicle, 1631, p. 1032, recording that the founder 'did very publicquely and audibly in the Chappell of the same Colledge reade and publish one writing quadrupartite in parchment whereby hee did make, create, erect, found and stablish the said colledge . . . . and did subscribe his name and fix his seal,' &c. One of the copies of the deed of foundation, signed by Alleyn and the witnesses named above, as well as by Howes himself, will be found below, Mun. 584. Howes gives the same list of those present, with the addition of his own name, 'gentleman and chronicler,' and 'Lyonell Titchborne of Grayes Inne, gent.' To the names of Sir Edm. Bowyer, of Camberwell, Sir Tho. Grymes, of Peckham, Sir John Bodley, of Streatham, and Sir John Tonstall, of Carshalton, he appends a note: 'These foure knights were justices of the peace for the co. of Surrey'; and he describes Jo. Finch [afterwards Lord Finch, Lord Keeper] as of Gray's Inn, Rich. Jones as Secretary to the Lord Chancellor, and Rich. Talboyes as of the Inner Temple.

<sup>2</sup> Diego Sarmiento d'Acunha, Conde de Gondomar. This was a farewell visit, as he left England in May. Alleyn had probably entertained him at the Bear Garden, as he did the Marquis Inijosa, Spanish Ambassador Extraordinary, in the following year; of whom we read in a letter of 12 July, 1623:—‘The Spanish Ambassador is much delighted in bear baiting. He was the last week in Paris Garden, where they showed him all the pleasure they could, both with bull, bear and horse, besides jackanapes, and then turned a white bear into the Thames, where the dogs baited him swimming, which was the best sport of all’ (Court and Times of James I., vol. ii. p. 410).

According to Watt (Bibliotheca Britannica, 1824) printed by T. L., London, 1654, 8vo. Both in the printed title, as given by Watt, and on the fly-leaf of the present MS., the author is styled Serjeant-at-Law; but the only serjeant of the name in Dugdale's Origines Juridiciales is Thomas Snagge, appointed in 1580. R. Snagge appears in a list of counsel in Elizabeth's reign given by Foss, Judges of England, 1857, vol. v. p. 423.

MS. No. XIV.

CATALOGUE of a collection of pictures belonging to William Cartwright, actor and bookseller; temp. Charles II.

The catalogue is apparently in Cartwright's own hand. It originally contained descriptions of two hundred and thirty-nine pictures, a few prints and drawings being included; but a single leaf, containing nos. 186-209, has been lost. The prices for which the pictures were purchased are generally given in the margin; and, in some cases, the names of the artists are added. The name which most frequently recurs is that of Heemskerk [see below]; and there are examples of Greenhill [see below], William Dobson [b. 1610, d. 1646], Flusshers [Balthazar Flessiers, temp. Chas. I.], John Payn [d. ante 1648], Breughel, Tintoretto, Johnson [Laurence Johnson?, engraver, temp. Jas. I.], Isaac Fuller [d. 1672], Housman [see below], Burbage [see below], and Walton [Parrey Walton, keeper of the King's pictures, d. circ. 1700].

William Cartwright died at the end of 1686 or 1687, and bequeathed his pictures to Dulwich College<sup>1</sup>; but many of those here enumerated either never came into possession of the College or were afterwards lost, and others were probably destroyed on account of the grossness of the subjects depicted.

The collection in general appears to have been of little value; but many of the portraits are of historical interest, and some, especially those by Greenhill, possess considerable artistic merit. A list of the portraits is given below, the numbers referring to Cartwright's catalogue and the asterisk marking those which are still at the College.<sup>1</sup> The spelling, which in the original is very illiterate, has been modernised.

Norden in 1603, with the representation of the city cavalcade on the Lord Mayor's Day, which is very curious.' The name of Will. Cartwright as an actor frequently occurs in Downe's Roscius Anglicanus, 1708. He was a member of the King's company after the Restoration, and among other characters played Falstaff in Henry IV, and Brabantio in Othello. He was probably a son of Will. Cartwright, the actor, mentioned by Alleyn in his Diary (see below, p. 207, n. 4.); and a passage in praise of Alleyn is inserted in his reprint of Heywood's Apology for Actors, published in 1658. The circumstances of his bequest are stated in the College Audit Book, 4 Sept., 1688 (Extracts by Rev. E. A. Giraud, Brit. Mus., Add. MS. 29479A, f. 22b), as follows:—'William Cartwright, gent., deceased, by his will in writing in or about December, 1686 [sic, but 1687 in MS. vi, above, art. 39], not naming any executors, gave unto this College his books and pictures, two silver tankards, damask linen, an Indian quilt, and a Turkey carpet, together with 400*l.* in money, as a legacy for the benefit of the said College, and soon after died, leaving the said legacy and all he had besides in the possession of his servants, Francis Johnson and his wife. On or about the 14th of January following, by commission or direction from the Prærogative Court, all the goods of the said Mr. Cartwright which his said servants would produce, besides 390 pieces of broad old gold, were inventoried, appraised and valued at 94*l.* 15*s.* . . . . About the 1st of February following, the said Warden with great difficulty got into possession of all the goods that were so appraised, except such goods as are mentioned at this latter end of the inventory, exhibited by him into the Prærogative Court, valued by two of the said appraisers at 29*l.* 10*s.*, which the said servants with their confederates have carried away, together with the said 390 pieces of broad old gold.' Of the pictures mentioned by Aubrey only those of the Founder and his wife and Prince Henry are now at the College.

5. Queen Mary's picture, in orange-coloured bodice, after Vandyck, copied by 'oul Reme'<sup>1</sup>; in a gilt frame; a closet piece. 5*l.*
10. The print of Erasmus; in a black frame, 'filited' with gold.
12. The print of Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk; a closet piece, in a gilt frame, by 'Hollbaine.'
- 56.* Bishop Laud's picture, in black and white; in a gilt frame; a small closet piece.
62. 'Hemskirt's'<sup>2</sup> head, done by himself; in a gilt frame; a small closet piece. 10*l.*
- 68.* The Duke of York; in a gilt frame, on 3 quarters cloth. 'Grinhill.'<sup>3</sup> 2*l.*
- 72.* A woman in a blue mantle; in a gilt frame, on a 3 quarters cloth; done by 'Housman.'<sup>4</sup> 5*l.*
- 76.* King Charles the Second, on 3 quarters cloth; in a gilt frame. 2*l.*
- 77.* Althea's<sup>5</sup> picture, her hair dishevelled; on 3 quarters cloth, in a gilt frame. 2*l.*
- 78.* My first wife's picture like a shepherdess, on 3 quarters cloth; in a gilt frame. 3*l.*
- 93.* Queen Mary [Henrietta Maria] in a white satin gown; a large piece, in a gilt frame, to the knees. 5*l.*
- 94.* King Charles the First, in a slashed doublet and a ruff; a large piece, in a gilt frame, to the knees. 2*l.*
- 95.* 'Grenhill's' picture to the knees, in red, done by himself. 5*l.*
- 96.* The Duchess of Suffolk,<sup>6</sup> on a board, in a white gown embroidered with pearl; in an old-fashioned frame, to the knees. 5*l.*

<sup>3</sup> John Greenhill, born 1649, died 1676; a pupil of Sir P. Lely and a promising artist. His portrait of himself, no. 95, is engraved in the later editions of Walpole's Anecdotes of Painting (ed. Dallaway, 1827, vol. iii. p. 46). The engraving in Walpole's first edition, 1763, is taken from another picture.

105.* 'Mr Burbig' his head; in a gilt frame; a small closet piece. 5*s.*

106. 'Mr Demetrus' picture; in a gilt frame; done by Gild . . . . [Geldorp?] 10*s.*

109. Mr. Sly's<sup>6</sup> picture, the actor; in a gilt frame. 1*l.*

Duke of Suffolk. The costume, however, is of a later period; and, if the picture really represents a Duchess of Suffolk, it is more probably Frances Brandon, wife of Henry Grey, the last Duke [created 1551, beheaded 1554], by whom she was mother of Lady Jane Grey. She afterwards married Adrian Stokes, and died at the end of 1559.

<sup>3</sup> This is a very interesting portrait. It is, however, far too early for any Earl of Exeter, the first who bore the title being Thomas Cecil, cr. in 1605. It may, perhaps, be Henry Holland, the last Duke of Exeter, succ. 1446, died 1473. By his wife Anne, sister of Edward IV., he had a daughter, Anne, married to Thomas Grey, first Marquis of Dorset, grandfather of Henry Grey, Duke of Suffolk, mentioned in the note above.

112. 'Mis Wessons' picture; in a black frame, 3 quarters cloth, studded with gold. 1*l.*
113. 'Mr Wessons' picture; in a black frame, studded with gold, 3 quarters cloth. 1*l.*
114. 'Mr Brutnalls' picture; in a black frame, 'filited' with gold, 3 quarters cloth. 2*l.*
115. My last wife's sister's husband; in a black frame, 3 quarters cloth.
- 116.* My last wife's picture, with a black veil on her head; in a gilt frame, 3 quarters cloth. 3*l.*
- 117.* A man with a bald head; in a gilt frame, in 3 quarters cloth; done by 'Grinhill.' 10*l.*
- 118.* Queen Mary,<sup>1</sup> in blue; in a gilt frame, 3 quarters cloth. 2*l.*
- 120.* My last wife's sister<sup>2</sup>; in a black frame, 3 quarters cloth; a book in her hand, and in a hat. 10*s.*
- 121.* 'My Lord Louless'<sup>3</sup> in a red mantle; in a black frame, 3 quarters cloth. 1*l.*
- 148.* Tom Bond's<sup>4</sup> picture, an actor, in 'a band rought with imbroderie, bared neck,' on a board; in a black frame, very old. 5*s.*
150. Mr. [or Mrs.] Blundall in an old-fashioned dress; in a black and gilt frame, on a 3 quarters cloth. 8*s.*
155. The Earl of Essex<sup>5</sup> lying dead in his bed, his crown on his bosom; in a black frame. 5*s.*
- 156.* Mr. Dirge's wife in a hat and ruff; in a black frame, 3 quarters cloth.

<sup>4</sup> Little is known of this actor. His name is in the cast of Marmion's comedy, Holland's Leaguer, played by the company of Prince Charles in 1632.

<sup>5</sup> Probably Robert Devereux, third Earl of Essex, the Parliamentary general. He died 14 Sept., 1646, and was honoured with a public funeral in Westminster Abbey. An account of the mutilation of his effigy and hearse, which is referred to below, no. 184, is quoted by Lysons from The Perfect Diurnal, 23-30 Nov., 1646.

169. Young Mr. Cartwright, actor ; in a gilt frame. 15*s.*

179.* 'Loulass his father'<sup>6</sup> in black armour and a red scarf ; on a board, in an old black frame.

181.* 'Serjeant Loulass'<sup>8</sup> in his red robes, on a board, with his coat of arms ; in a black frame, 'filited' with gold. 10*s.*

<sup>1</sup> Sir William Lovelace, of Bethersden, co. Kent, son of Serjeant Lovelace (no. 181) and grandfather of the poet ; born 1561, knighted 1599, died 1629. See the pedigree of the family in a paper on the Kentish Lovelaces by the Rev. A. J. Pearman, in the Archæologia Cantiana, vol. x., 1876, p. 208.

<sup>8</sup> William Lovelace, of Bethersden, great-grandfather of the poet ; M.P. for Canterbury 1563-1577, serjeant-at-law 1567, died 1577.

182. 'My lady Loulass' with a little monkey in her arms, on a cloth, to the knees ; in a black frame. 1*L*.

184. The old man that demolished the Earl of Essex in the Abbey of Westminster, with a 'hattich' [hatchet?] : in a black frame.

229. A great picture of 'my lady Blundall,' with a dog by her. 10*s.*

230. A picture from head to foot of 'my Lord of Dorset' ; in a black frame. 2*L*.

231. A picture from head to foot, in black, with a counsellor's staff ; in a black frame. 2*L*.

234.* My picture in a black dress, with a great dog.

MS. No. XV.

A COLLECTION of Drawings, apparently students' copies, in various hands, and generally of little merit, together with a few paintings of flowers, coloured coats of arms, &c.; 17th century.

The volume probably came to the College with the pictures bequeathed by William Cartwright.

Small folio, ff. 88.

MS. No. XVI.

LETTERS and Papers relating to purchases of pictures made by Noel Joseph Desenfans,<sup>1</sup> and to that portion of his collection bequeathed by him to Sir Peter Francis Bourgeois,<sup>2</sup> knt., R.A., and by the latter to Dulwich College; 1787–1810.

I. ACCOUNT by N. J. Desenfans of his business transactions with Jean Baptiste Pierre Le Brun,<sup>3</sup> art critic and picture dealer, of Paris; Sept., 1787–Jan., 1788. f. 1.

<sup>1</sup> Born at Douai in 1745. He came to England as a teacher of languages, but ultimately devoted himself to the business of a picture dealer. In 1790 he was commissioned to collect pictures for Stanislaus Poniatowski, King of Poland, and was named Polish Consul-General for Great Britain. After the partition of Poland he was compelled to offer the collection for sale, having first made two attempts to dispose of it to the Czar (see below, art. 12). His Descriptive Catalogue (London, 1802, 2 vols.) includes 188 pictures. Only thirty-nine of these are now at Dulwich; and there is no evidence that the rest of the 381 pictures in the College gallery ever formed part of the collection made for Stanislaus. Desenfans died 8 July, 1807, having by his will, dated 8 Oct., 1803, left the whole of his pictures, &c., to his friend Sir P. F. Bourgeois.

<sup>2</sup> Born in London in 1756, of a family of Swiss extraction. He studied painting under Loutherbourg, and during his travels abroad was knighted by Stanislaus, King of Poland. He was made A.R.A. in 1788 and R.A. in 1793, and held the appointment of landscape painter to George III. He died 8 Jan., 1811. For his will see below, art. 21.

<sup>3</sup> Born 1748, died 1813. He was husband of Marie Louise Elisabeth Vigée, famous as a portrait painter and for esprit. Mad. Le Brun has drawn his character in her Souvenirs (Paris, 1835–1837):—‘Ce n'est pas que M. Le Brun fût un méchant homme. Son caractère offrait un mélange de douceur et de vivacité: il était d'une grande obligeance pour tout le monde—en un mot, assez aimable—mais sa passion effrénée pour les femmes de mauvaises mœurs, jointe à la passion du jeu, a causé la ruine de sa fortune et de la mienne, dont il disposait entièrement, au point qu'en 1789, lorsque je quittai la France, je ne possédais pas vingt francs de revenu après avoir gagné pour ma part plus d'un million; il avait tout mangé.’

Exclusive of those marked as returned, the number of pictures sent by Le Brun to Desenfans during the above period was forty-six, sixteen of which were for sale on commission with joint profits. The most important works purchased were:—‘un tableau représentant Thésée<sup>1</sup> par N. Poussin,’ 334*l.*; ‘un grand paysage de Cuyp,’ 300*l.*; ‘un grand paysage de Cuyp,’ 254*l.*; ‘un paysage<sup>2</sup> de Nicolo Poussin, avec Calisto,’ 70*l.*; ‘deux Clades’ 75*l.*; ‘un boiteux de Teniers,’ 65*l.*; ‘un petit St Jean par Raphael,’<sup>3</sup> 25*l.*

On f. 3*b* is the note, ‘1788, dans le courant de Janvier j'ai acheté pour Mr Lebrun Le Vanderwerff de feu Mr Antrobus pour £500 sterlings’; and on f. 5 is a list of six pictures purchased in 1787 of Mr. Donjeu, viz. ‘des Anges par Rubens,’ 50*l.*; ‘le Mariage de Ste Catharine par Cortone,’ 75*l.*; ‘une Ste famille par Paris Bourdon,’ 20*l.*; ‘Les Maries au tombeau par S. Rosa,’ 40*l.*; ‘l'offre des Bergers par A. Sacchi,’ 33*l.*; ‘une tête de Rembrandt,’ 25*l.*

2. LIST, in the hand of J. B. P. Le Brun, of forty-two pictures, with prices attached; [1787]. f. 6.

Besides the works named in art. 1 the list includes: ‘La fontaine de Philipe Wouermanse,<sup>4</sup> 260 louis; ‘L'intérieur d'une chambre d'Ostade,’ 200 louis; ‘Le jeux de Galet par Ostade,’ 208½ louis; ‘Un grand Vinatse [Wijnants] très capital,’ 150 louis; ‘Un grand Salvator,’ 500 louis.

3. GAVIN INGLIS HAMILTON<sup>5</sup> to N. J. Desenfans: is sorry to hear he is not satisfied with Vanni's picture, which is certainly genuine; wishes he had mentioned his disapproval before it was shown to the public, as it will now be looked

upon as his refusal; thinks, therefore, it had better be kept till he himself arrives in England, when, with his assistance, it may probably be sold to advantage; has many pictures worthy of being proposed to him, but has been so unlucky of late that he is resolved to send no more; never sends a picture by which he [Desenfans] will be out of pocket, and, in sending the Vanni for the low sum of 50*l.*, really meant to do him a service; hopes soon to be in England with a collection of good pictures, including in particular fine works of Polidoro, and, as some of these are of great size, must look out for a large house; Rome, 20 Sept., 1788. f. 7.

vous joindré le détaille. Je suis bien facher de ne pas m' estre trouvé à Londres lors de la vente des tableaux de Mr Rigby. Il y avais de belle chauze. Le Sieur Vandergutts<sup>1</sup> m'envoy un Rembrand, qu'il a achetté 150 louis, qui avais été vendue 500 chez nous, et il n'ent veult pas moin. Parlant de lui, il m'a ecrie une longue épître pour me prouvé que j'avais le plus grand tor de ne pas lui avoir vandue mes Poussin, et qu'il est bin mal à moy de les avoir vandu à son plus grand ennemie, qu'enfin il commençais une établissement qui avais le plus grand succes, et qu'il voulais reprendre ses correspondance avec moy. Vous devé juger que je vins de lui en répondre sir page, par le quel je lui prouve qu'il veux tout gagner et atrapé les autres. Je lui et [ai] seulement die de prendre garde à faire comme il a déjà fait avec selui de Pall Mall, que quand à moy je ne verais rien ; que je me félisittais de ce que sa brouille m'avais procuré le plaisir de vous connoiture et que nous etions fort comptant l'un de l'autre. Je deviens toujour insertain pour savoir sie je pouré aller en Engletaire, quard [car] il me vien de me venir trois vente de conséquence à faire. Dans la premier de Mr le baron d'Holbac<sup>2</sup> il y a une Baitte [bête] unique et superbe de Berchem, un Wowermanse ansamble de la plus grande bauté, une petite fette de villages par Teniers très riche, g[r]avé par Daulé, deux baux Lenain de 4 pids sur 3, une chaste Suzanne du Bourdon, enfin un Poussins qui a une grande réputation, représentant Jupiter et Calistau,<sup>3</sup> gravé daprès ce tableau par Daullé. Il a environ 5 pieds de large sur 4 pieds de hautt. Je n'en suis nullement comptant et ne vous l'enverrais pas. Je serais aize que Vendergutts le fit achetté en cachette. Je l'en et [ai] informé exprais, cela m'amuserais. Parlant de Poussins, votre Davide<sup>4</sup> s'est mon père qui le vendie au vieux Vandergutts pour 8000 livres. Je m'en resouviens bien ; le seul reproche étais que les figures étais les unes sur les autres sans asser de perceptive aérienne pour moy. Je l'aime beaucoup et s'est un superbe tableau. . . .

'Vous jugé bien qu'il n'en n'est aucun que je n'u vendue à bon bénefisse, sie j'u voulu m'en deffaire. Je [j'ai] refuser pour plusieur de grand prie.

'Il est inutille, que je vous dise, qu'il n'i a rien d'équivoque et que tout est de la plus belle conservation. S'est, je crois, vous en dirre asser que de vous dirre que je les réservais depuis longtemps pour moy et en orné ma gallery. Je vous donneré tout cette partie<sup>2</sup> pour deux mill Louis ; je seré loin de gagne. Je veux vendre tout cette partie ensemble :—1<sup>o</sup>, parceque j'e [j'ai] besoin de cette somme, que je tirrerais en quatre partie de mois en mois ; 2<sup>o</sup>, parceque, déparan tout ma collection et i renonsan, il fault que je place tout. Vous verré que seuq qui sont grand ou que seuq qui pourrais vous moin convenir, je [j'ai] hu soin de faire de grand sacrifice, affin que vous puissier y faire un bon bénefisse même en le vendant mal.

'Le Poussin seul peut et dois vous paier toute cette partie, aprais quoy il vous retira six tableaux plus beau les un que les autres dans leur genre.

'Je vous demandré ausie sie vous ne pourier pas me faire placé une collection de pierre gravé antiques en relief et en creux. C'est un choix bien rare, &c. . . .

7. J. B. P. LE BRUN to N. J. Desenfans: sees by his letter of the 19th inst. that it is thought that the Palais Royal collection will come to England, but believes that all idea of this is given up; sends him the pictures as below, 'pour m'aquitté avec vous de la lettre de change de 3696 livres';
Paris, 27 Oct., 1790. f. 17.

The pictures are eight in number:—'La transfiguration, tableau capital du Sequedon, d'environ 3 pieds de hauteur sur 2 pie[ds] 4 pouces de largeur'; 'La vierge tenant l'anfan Jésus, par Simon da Contariny, die le Pezarese. Il a gravé lui même se tableau à l'au forte'; 'St Cicille touchan de l'orgue,<sup>2</sup> figures de grandeur naturel, dans le hauft une gloire d'anges, par Augustain Carrache. Ce tableau a été un peu frotté, mais cen cela il vaudrais 10000 livres. Hauteur
5 pieds; largeur 3 pieds 3 pouces'; 'La vierge, l'enfan Jésus et St Jean par Salsauferatte, très beau tableau dans le genre de la Madonna del Sedia de Raphael. Vandergutts a vu ce tableau et voulais me l'achetté. Comme je vous le reservais avec les autres je ne pas voulu lui vendre. Hauteur 3 pieds; largeur 2 pieds'; 'Un repas composé de 3 figures à mie corps qui fon de la musique,<sup>3</sup> par Le Nain.
Hauteur 12 pouces; largeur 15 pouces'; 'Un paisage par Akert [Hackert] enrichie de figures, barque, &c., par Vernet. Hauteur
2 pieds 4 pouces; largeur 2 pieds 9 pouces'; 'Le Christe, composition de 4 figures, par Jacques Stella. Hauteur 2 pieds; largeur 16
[pouces]'; 'Un paisage eclairé au soleil couchan, par Pinaquer [Pijnacker] en Italie, du plus beau stile. Hauteur 2 pieds  $\frac{1}{2}$ ; largeur 3 pieds  $\frac{1}{2}$ '.

8. JOHN POPKIN to his brother, Pan. Popkin, at Chelsea, declining to accept from the latter a seal given him by Noel Desenfans ; Swansea, 12 Feb., 1794. f. 19.

9. ‘PICTURES to be sold’ : a list, in the hand of N. J. Desenfans, of three hundred and seventy pictures, arranged according to the rooms in which they were hung, with prices attached ; no date. f. 21.

The prices are generally low, the largest sum being for no. 170, ‘Samson and Delila,’ by Rubens [Dulwich Gallery, no. 168. After Rubens], 800 guineas. A few other pictures now at Dulwich may perhaps be included.

10. ‘CATALOGUE d’une collection précieuse de [74] tableaux des trois écoles, provenants des plus belles et anciennes collections qu’il y ait eu en France, appartenant au citoyen Viller, qui vendra le tout ensemble ou par école seulement si l’on en préféroit une ou deux. Il ne vendra qu’en Guinées’; [circ. 1795]. With critical remarks in the margin in the hand of J. B. P. Le Brun. In pamphlet form, stitched. f. 27.

11. MEMORIAL from Noel [Joseph] Desenfans, ‘ci-devant Consul Général de Pologne en Angleterre,’ to Paul I., Emperor of Russia, praying him to discharge a debt of 623*l.* sterling, being the unpaid balance, with interest, of a sum of 1,800*l.* advanced by him on behalf of the government of Stanislaus, King of Poland, in 1793, to the Chevalier Bukaty, Polish minister in England ; London, 6 May, 1798. Copy, in the hand of Desenfans. f. 40.

12. ‘MÉMOIRE’ addressed by N. J. Desenfans to Alexander I., Emperor of Russia : In 1790 the Prince Primate, brother and first minister of Stanislaus, King of Poland, persuaded the memorialist to give up his business (by which he was making between 2,000*l.* and 3,000*l.* a year), and devote himself to the service of Poland, ‘en l’assurant que pour l’en dédommager Sa Majesté Polonoise lui donneroit une charge publique à Londres et celle de chercher et d’achetter pour elle les beaux tableaux qu’on offriroit en vente à des prix raisonnables’; began, therefore, to form the desired collection, and, some time after, received from the King a patent of nobility and the rank of colonel, together with the appointment of Polish Consul-General for Great Britain, but this office, far from being profitable, was only a source of expense and trouble; at the request of the Prince Primate advanced 1,800*l.* to the Chevalier Bukaty, Polish minister, to enable him to quit England, and incurred also a heavy outlay in relieving a crowd of Polish refugees after the revolution at Warsaw, in return for which the King, in spite of his distress, sent him two sums amounting together to a little more than 1,300*l.*, assuring him at the same time that when his own affairs were re-established all his expenses should be paid; although matters went from worse to worse, still hoped for ultimate payment for the collection, which had already cost 9,000*l.*, but on the King’s death claimed the protection of the English Government, and prayed them to use their interest in his favour with the Russian Court; Lord Grenville, Secretary of State, having admitted the justice of his claim, requested Lord Whitworth, ambassador at St. Petersburg, to support it, and sent him the proofs, letters, and memoir, but unfortunately the harmony between the two Courts soon after came to an end, and Lord Whitworth returned, leaving all the papers among the archives of the Embassy; when the archives were afterwards burnt, to prevent their falling into the hands of the Russian Government, the proofs of his claim perished with them, but the facts are within the memory of Lord Grenville and Lord Whitworth, and can be otherwise established ; prays, therefore, for a sum of about 4,000*l.*, to compensate him for the loss of his business, advances of money, expenses, with interest, on account of the pictures, and his charges and lack of emoluments as Consul-General. When Lord Grenville, towards the end of 1799, sent the memorialist's first memoir to St. Petersburg, an offer of the collection was made to the late Emperor for about 9,000*l.*, its then value at cost price ; to make it more complete, has since added to it some fine pictures of the Italian school, bringing the cost up to 12,000 guineas, and offers it for this sum ; if the Emperor is unwilling to add these pictures to his gallery, must put them up to auction, but, as sales by auction cost ten per cent. including Government dues, this will cause an expense of more than 1,000*l.*, which he prays the Emperor to allow him, for, having expended so much care and trouble in forming the collection, ‘ il seroit dur pour lui être aujourd’hui à de tels frais pour s’en défaire,’ his claim, therefore, amounts in all to 5,000*l.*, the recovery of which he solicits with confidence ‘de l’auguste Souverain qui possède et règne aujourd’hui sur les états au service desquels cette dette fut contractée,’ &c. ; London, 22 June, 1801. Copy. Preceded by a draft, in the hand of N. J. Desenfans, of the earlier portion of the memorial, somewhat differently worded. ff. 41, 42.

13. LORD WHITWORTH<sup>1</sup> to N. J. Desenfans, in answer to a request for the return of his papers, to the effect that they were left with the rest of the archives of the English Embassy when he quitted St. Petersburg, and possibly shared the fate of the other correspondence when the archives were destroyed, some time after his departure, to prevent their

14. N. J. DESENFANS to Lord Whitworth, acknowledging the above, and requesting him to certify, under the enclosed memorial, the receipt of the papers from the Secretary of State's office, and also to give him two or three lines for Lord Hawkesbury; London, 22 June, 1801. Copy. f. 46b.

15. LORD WHITWORTH to N. J. Desenfans, enclosing a certificate that he received from Lord Grenville, Foreign Secretary, in 1799, the papers referred to in the memorial, and that they were left at St. Petersburg and probably destroyed with the rest of the archives after his departure; London, 24 June, 1801.<sup>1</sup> Copy. f. 47.

The list is as follows, the numbers in brackets being those attached to the same pictures in the Dulwich Gallery, according to the new catalogue<sup>2</sup> :—

MS. No. XVII.

'A BRIEF CATALOGUE of Pictures late the property of Sir [Peter] Francis Bourgeois, R.A., with the sizes and proportions of the pictures,' by J[ohn] Britton [the antiquary, b. 1771, d. 1857]; 24 May, 1813.

'J. Britton submits this as a very concise and imperfect catalogue of the collection of pictures; and has adopted the names of many of the artists and the subjects of their works generally from the late Sir Francis Bourgeois' communications to Jas. Gill, his servant.'

The pictures are three hundred and seventy-one in number, and are catalogued according to their position on the walls of the several rooms, &c., as shown in a plan at the top of each page.

Small quarto, ff. 34.

MUNIMENTS.

(SECTION I.)

DOCUMENTS relating to the Theatre and Bear Garden ; 1546-1662 :—

1. BARGAIN AND SALE<sup>1</sup> by Rauf Symondes, of Cley, co. Norfolk, gent., to Thomas Langham, of London, fishmonger, for 80*l.*, of 3 tenements, in the tenure of Richard Richardson, John Bucke, and John Edmondes, in Goldingelane, and one tenement, in the tenure of William Gill, in Whitecrosse Strete, in the parish of St. Giles without Cripplegate, London. Dat. 12 July, 38 Hen. VIII. [1546]. Copy.

2, 3. BARGAIN AND SALE by Thomas Langham, of London, fishmonger, and Robert Langham, his son and heir, to William Gill, of the parish of St. Giles without Cripplegate, gardener, for 100*l.*, of 3 tenements, &c., in the same parish, two on the east side of Goldingelane and the third on the west side of Whitecross Street, in the tenure of the same Will. Gill or his assigns. Dat. 29 Jan., 8 Eliz. [1566]. Signed ; with one seal. Followed by a copy of the same.

4. FEOFFMENT from Thomas Langham and Robert Langham, his son, to William Gill, of the same three tenements, &c. Dat. 29 Jan., 8 Eliz. [1566]. Lat. Signed; with seals.

5, 6. FINE by Thomas Langham and Elizabeth, his wife, to William Gill of the same three tenements, &c., for 100*l.* Dat. Mich. term, 10 Eliz. [1568]. Lat. In duplicate.

7. LETTERS PATENT of Qu. Elizabeth, granting to Raphe Bowes,<sup>1</sup> esq., the office of master of 'our game pastymes and sportes, that is to saie of all and everie our beares bulles and mastyve dogges,' in 'as large and ample manner and forme as Cuthbert Vaughan or Sir Richard Longe, deceased.' Dat. 2 June, a<sup>o</sup> 15 [1573]. Exemplified at the request of Morgan Pope, merchant, 18 Nov., a<sup>o</sup> 28 [1585].

8. LEASE<sup>2</sup> from Ambrose Nicholas and William Boxe, aldermen, and other parishioners of St. Mildred, Bread Street, London, to William Gryffyn, of London, vintner, of a messuage, &c., called the 'little Rose,' with two gardens adjoining, in the parish late called St. Margaret's, then and now in the parish of St. Saviour, Southwark, for 31 years at a rent of 7*l.*, the same having been granted to the par. of St. Mildred, 3 Dec., 1552, by Thomasyn, widow of Raphe Symonds, of London, <sup>1</sup> See above, MS. ii. art 1. The original patent appears to be in the possession of Mr. Collier (Mem. of Edw. Alleyn, p. 70). He speaks of it, however, as granted to John Dorrington, instead of Ralph Bowes; but the date, which is the same as that of the above document, shows that he must be in error. He mentions this exemplification (p. 60), but wrongly dates it 8 Nov., 1586, and makes this the date not of the exemplification, but of the actual grant. Neither the original patent nor the exemplification is included by Edw. Alleyn in the list of 'Wrightings of the bear-garden' in MS. viii. f. 43*b*. This list contains thirty-three deeds, together with ten bonds, but not one of the number is to be found among the Muniments. Morgan Pope seems to have derived his interest in the garden from several parties, including Ralph Bowes and Edward Bowes, and to have made it over to one Hayes, from whom it passed to Burnable, and so to Edw. Alleyn. See above, p. 67, n. 4, and Alleyn Papers, p. xvii.

fishmonger. Dat. 20 Nov., 17 Eliz. [1574]. Signed; with seals. Endorsed by Edw. Alleyn, 'y<sup>e</sup> lease of St Myldredes of y<sup>e</sup> rose.'

9. WILL of William Gill, of the parish of St. Giles without Cripplegate, London, gardener, bequeathing, inter alia, his dwelling-house and four tenements in Gouldinglane, lately purchased from Thomas Langham, to Katherine, his wife, for life, and after to Daniel Gill, the elder; and four other tenements to Richard Yaton in tail, with remainder to Daniel Gill, the younger. Dat. 21 Apr., 1575. With probate, 5 Nov., 1576.

10. ASSIGNMENT by William Griffen, of London, vintner, to Robert Withens, of London, vintner, for 105*l.*, of his lease of 'the little rose,' as above, no. 8. Dat. 11 Dec., 1579. Signed; with seal.

11. POWER OF ATTORNEY from Daniel Gill, the elder, and Daniel Gill, the younger, of the Isle of Man, to Patrick Brewe, one of the overseers of the will of William Gill, to receive from Katheryn, widow of William Gill, and his co-overseers all deeds, &c., relating to tenements bequeathed them in Golden Lane and the balance of a legacy of 25*l.* Dat. 14 Feb., 22 Eliz. 14. FEOFFMENT from Daniel Gill, the elder, to Daniel Gill, clerk, his son, of the same six messuages, &c., late belonging to William Gill and in the tenure of Patrick Brewe. Dat. 10 Oct., 26 Eliz. [1584]. Lat. With seal.

15. ASSIGNMENT by Robert Withens, of London, vintner, to Philip Hinchley [Henslowe], of London, dyer, of the lease of the 'Little Rose,' in the parish of St. Saviour, Southwark, as above, no. 8.<sup>1</sup> Dat. 24 Mar., 27 Eliz., 1584[5]. Signed; with seal of arms.

16. DEED of partnership between Philip Hinshley [Henslowe], of London, dyer, and John Cholmley, of London, grocer, for 8*1*/<sub>2</sub> years, in a parcel of ground on the Bankside in the parish of St. Saviour, Southwark, and in a playhouse to be erected thereon at the cost of Phil. Henslowe by John Grygges, carpenter; the said John Cholmley to pay 8*16l.* in quarterly instalments of 2*5l.* 10*s.*, to have half the receipts, and to hold a small tenement at the south end of the ground near Maiden Lane and Rosse Alley, 'to keepe victualinge in, or to putt to any other vse.' Dat. 10 Jan., 29 Eliz., 1586[7]. Signed by John Cholmley.

17. WILL of Daniel Gill, of St. Andrew's, Isle of Man, clerk, containing bequests to Daniel Gill, his father, Katherine, his mother, William and Edward, his brothers, Jony, his sister, and others, and leaving his lands, tenements, &c., in London in trust for Katherine, Elizabeth, Jane and Margaret, his daughters, with a charge of 6*l.* yearly for life to Elizabeth, 66. BILL in Chancery of Thomas [Tobias] Lisle against Dulwich College, praying for relief against actions at law by the College for the recovery of 60*l.*, arrears of rent due on two leases held by the complainant, dated 16, 22 July, 1639,—the one of one-twelfth part of the Fortune playhouse for 21 years, for 18*l.* 4*s.* 2*½d.*, arrears of rent due on a former lease from Edward Alleyn to Mary Bryan, and 10*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.* yearly rent; the other of one-eighth part of the same for 21 years for 50*l.* [sic] 6*s.* 10*d.*, arrears on former leases to Margaret Gray, and 16*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.* yearly rent,—the complainant alleging that he was trustee for Mary Mynshowe and Susan Cade, nieces of John Ball, a lunatic in his charge; followed by the answer of the defendants and proofs. Endorsed, 'Rolls, Thursday, 26 Nov., 1646.' Paper, 6 sheets.

67, 68, 69. BILL in Chancery of Dulwich College against Tobias Lisle and Thomas Grymes, claiming arrears of rent for shares in the Fortune playhouse, with answers, proofs, and counsel's notes. Three copies, the first two endorsed 1647 and the third 1649. Paper, each six sheets.

The substance of Tobias Lisle's answer is that, at the entreaty of the College, he took in trust for A. Minshawe and S. Cade the two leases forfeited by Mary Bryan and Margaret Gray, as above, no. 66, paying 18*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* and 55*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.* for arrears, on condition that the College procured the surrender of the original leases made to Bryan and Gray, and that, if 'the partes of the playhouse should not arrise and make more proffitt then the rentes to be reserved and repaiers and interest of the moneys att 8*l* per centum for the disbursmentes of the arreres, that the Master, Warden, &c., would repaye the 55<sup>ii</sup> 6<sup>8</sup> 10<sup>d</sup> and the 18<sup>ii</sup> 14<sup>8</sup> 2<sup>d</sup>, with the rentes the defendant should paye for the partes in the meane time and interest'; these conditions not having been observed by the College, although 'before he had raysed 5*l* profitte the Parliament putt downe playes, soe, his covenauant restreyninge him from putting them [the premises] to other vses, and Gray and Bryan not surrenderinge their leases, he was disabled to make any proffitt.'

He also mentions that 'about 9 yeares sync' he became assignee of a half-share in trust for Elizabeth Shanckes, his interest in which, at the request of the same Elizabeth and her husband, he afterwards made over to Winifred Shanckes.<sup>1</sup>

Thomas Grymes denies that he has any lease or assignment, but states 'that he, having a very great stock of Apparrell both for men and women, did furnishe the actors of the playhowse, and therfore they allowed him a part or share out of the playhowse and paid him other somes of money out of the proffittes of the howse and still [are] indetted to him.'

According to the preamble of the bill the Fortune was divided by Edw. Alleyn in 1622 into twelve shares, and on the 20 May, 1622, leases of whole shares for 51 years at a rent of 10*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.* were granted to Richard Gunnell, Edw. Jackson, Thomas Sparkes, and Anthony Jarman, and leases of half-shares for 51 years at a rent of 5*l.* 6*s.* 11*d.* to Frances Juby, George Massey, Richard Price, John <sup>1</sup> John Shank, Schanke, or Shanckes, the actor, had a daughter Winifred, baptised at St. Giles, Cripplegate, 3 Aug., 1623 (Collier, Memoirs of Actors, 1846, p. 277). She seems, however, to have died in infancy, as the baptism of another daughter Winifred is registered on 19 May, 1626. This Winifred, again, was buried on 16 June, 1629, so that the Winifred Shanckes here mentioned must be a third daughter of the same name, perhaps by a different mother, the Elizabeth Martin whose marriage to a John Shank is registered on 26 Jan., 1630-1. John Shanckes himself was buried 27 Jan., 1635-6; and it may be inferred, from the mention of the husband of Elizabeth Shanckes at a later date, that she had married again.

Fisher, Thomas Wiggett, and Charles Massey. Further leases at the same rents were made to Margaret Graye of a half-share for 50 years, 1 Aug., 1623, and a whole share for  $40\frac{1}{2}$  [49 $\frac{1}{2}$ ] years, 29 Jan., 1624; to George Bosgrave and John Blak of half-shares for  $49\frac{1}{2}$  years, 20 Feb., 1624; to Mary Bryan of a whole share for  $49\frac{1}{4}$  years, 24 Mar., 1624; and to Thomas Gibborne of a whole share for  $40\frac{1}{4}$  [49 $\frac{1}{4}$ ] years, 21 Apr., 1624.

70. ANSWER of Thomas Alleyn, Master of Dulwich College, to the bill of complaint of Arthur Minshawe, Mary Minshawe, and Suzan Cade, denying that Tobias Lisle had been persuaded by himself or Matthias Alleyn to take a lease [of shares in the Fortune playhouse] in trust for Mary Minshawe and Suzan Cade, and to pay arrears of rent on former leases to Mary Bryan and Margaret Gray, on the conditions recited above, nos. 67-69. Dat. Nov., 1649. Paper, 9 sheets.

71. BILL in Chancery of William Beaven against Dulwich College, as above, MS. i. art. 131. Dat. [Nov., 1661]. Paper, 12 sheets.

72. DRAFT of a lease from Dulwich College to William Beaven of nineteen messuages, 'by him lately new built and erected on the ground whereon y<sup>e</sup> late demolished Fortune playhowse and taphowse heretofore stood and vpon the wast ground therevnto belonging,' for 21 years, at a rent of 34*l.* 10*s.*, with covenant for renewals for 21 years and 3 years. <sup>1</sup> 'The other side of this high street from Bishopsgate and Houndsditch, the first building is a large Inne for receipt of trauellers; then a faire house of late builded by the Lord John Powlet. Next to that, a farre more large and beautifull house with gardens of pleasure, bowling alleyes, and such like, builded by Jasper Fisher, free of the Goldsmithes, late one of the sixe clearkes of the Chauncery, and a Justice of peace. It hath since for a time beene the Earle of Oxfords place. The Queenes Maiestie Elizabeth hath lodged there. It now belongeth to M. Cornewallos. This house, being so largely and sumptuously builded by a man of no greater calling or possessions, was mockingly called Fishers Folly, and a Rithme was made of it and other the like in this manner, Kirkebies Castle and Fishers Folly, Spinilas Pleasure and Megses Glorie,' &c. (Stow, Survey of London, 1598, p. 128). In subsequent editions it is said to belong to Sir Roger Manners (ed. 1603) and to the Earl of Devonshire (ed. 1633). According to Fuller (Worthies, ed. 1840, vol. ii. p. 385), it was 'near Devonshire House, where now is the sign of the Pie,' that Alleyn was born. The name is still preserved in Devonshire Square.

MS. No. XVIII.

ALLEYN PAPERS. Vol. VII. Miscellaneous Papers connected with Edward Alleyn and Dulwich College; 1330–1662. Included are:—

1. ATTESTED COPIES from records in the Tower, made in 1638, relating to the Priory and Abbey of St. Saviour, Bermondsey, viz.:—

a. Inspeximus by Edward III. of grants by Henry I. of St. George's Church, Southwark, of Rodereia, Dilewic, &c., and of free-warren, in co. Surrey; of confirmations by Henry I. of grants by Hubert, son of Dudeman, of three 'mansiones' of land and by William II. of Bermondsey and St. Saviour's Church; and of confirmations by Henry II. of the possessions, &c., of the priory generally, and of Camberwell Church, granted by William de Mellent, Earl of Gloucester; Woodstock, 15 July, 4 Edw. III. [1330.] Lat. f. 1.

b. Inspeximus by Edward III. of a lease, dat. 4 Feb., from the priory to Thomas Dolsaly, pepperer, of Dilwysshe manor, for life; 21 Feb., 31 Edw. III. [1357]. Lat. f. 16.

c. Certificate from the return of benefices in the hands of aliens that Camberwell Church is appropriated to the alien priory of Bermondsey, and is held by Tho. Cortherope, rector of Goleston, at a rent of 20*l.* a year; 48 Edw. III. [1374]. Lat. f. 22.

- d. Grant by Richard II. to Richard Dunton, Prior of Bermondsey, and his successors of naturalisation in England, the priory no longer to be treated as alien so long as the prior and the majority of the monks shall be English born; 29 May, 4 Rich. II. [1381]. Lat. f. 24.

- 2. 'THAUNSWERE of John Croft to the bill of complaint [Mun. 338] of Margaret Calton, wydowe'; [1558]. f. 31.

[Munn. 67-69]; 1645. With a 'breviate' in the same suit; 1647. ff. 140, 145.

14. ANSWERS of John Roades [or Rhodes] and Susan Baskerville to a bill of Dulwich College, that they have paid all arrears of rent on their leases of the Fortune up to 1640, but that since then 'stage playes and playhowses have bene suppressed,' and they are therefore not answerable for rent, being forbidden by the terms of their leases to put the premises to any other use; 1648. With a demurrer on the part of the College; 1649. ff. 150, 158.

15. MEMORANDA of leases from Dulwich College to William Beaven of the site of the Fortune, &c., with the bill and decree in Chancery as above, MS. i. artt. 129, 131, 132; 24 July, 21 Nov., 1661, 4 Sept., 1662. ff. 164-218.

Paper, ff. 218. Quarto.

MS. No. XIX.

'THE PLATT of the Secound parte of the Seuen Deadlie Sinns': an outline of the action in the play of The Seven Deadly Sins, part ii., by Richard Tarleton, with the names of the performers, including R. Burbage, T. Pope, R. Cowley, A. Phillips, W. Sly, R. Pallant, and 'Ned' [Edward Alleyn ?]. Entitled on the outside 'The Booke and Platt,' &c.

Written in a large clear hand on a sheet of paper measuring 16 x 12 inches, with a hole in the centre near the top for the nail or peg by which it was suspended in the theatre. When found at Dulwich, it formed the cover for the play of The Tell-Tale, MS. xx.

First printed by Edm. Malone in 1780 in his Supplement to the Edition of Shakspeare published in 1778, vol. i. p. 58, accompanied by some remarks by George Steevens, and included also in Malone's Shakspeare, ed. Boswell, 1821, vol. iii. p. 348. Printed again by Mr. Collier, History of Dramatic Poetry, &c., 1831, vol. iii. p. 394 [ed. 1879, iii. 197].

Mr. Collier considers that the play consisted of pantomime and extempore dialogue on a pre-arranged plot, and he thus describes it:—‘It relates to three distinct stories, illustrating the consequences of Envy, Sloth, and Lechery: first, that of Gorboduc and his sons Ferrex and Porrex; secondly, that of Sardanapalus; and thirdly, that of Tereus; and the question arises, in what way Henry VI. and Lidgate were concerned in it. Henry VI. is in his tent, and probably Lidgate is supposed to regulate the performance in his presence, and for his amusement. In the course of the piece, Henry and Lidgate twice talk together, and Lidgate seems to act as chorus, to explain the dumb shows, and to deliver the prologue and epilogue.’

The ‘plat’ of the first part of the play, which probably dealt with Pride, Gluttony, Wrath, and Covetousness, has not been preserved. As Tarleton was buried 3 Sept., 1588, the piece must have been composed before that date.

MS. No. XX.

‘THE TELLTALE,’ a comedy in five acts. A part of the fourth act is missing, the leaves being left blank.

The scene is laid in Florence, the chief characters being the Duke, Aspero, his general, Hortensio, a Venetian prince, prisoner of war, Picentio, Bentivoglio, Victoria the Duchess, Isabella, her niece or cousin, and Elinor. The plot turns on the Duke’s unfounded jealousy of his wife and the intrigues of Aspero, who on the Duke’s reported death obtains the crown, after having, as he supposed, procured the murder of the Duchess and Picentio, her reputed lover, in prison. The title-character is Bentivoglio, as thus explained :—

‘Hort.—A fellow not worth anger. What’s the other—that ould fellow?’

‘Asp.—Lesse vainglorious but much more valiant ; and yet as euery man has one ydle humor or another, hee wants not his, and the traime this peacocke ys so proud of ys his tale.

‘Hort.—Does hee take such pleasure in an ould tale

‘Asp.—Ould or yong so yt bee in the likenes of a tale yt neuer comes amisse to him. The Duke knowes his humor so well hee giues way, and indeed lenes a kind of priuilege too’t and calls him his telltale.’

The name of the author is unknown and the play has not been printed, though it was advertised as being in the press in 1658 and 1661 (Halliwell, Dict. of Old English Plays, p. 242). The present unique copy, which is in a hand of the early part of the seventeenth century, appears to have belonged to the actor who played the leading part of the Duke, the word ‘mine’ being written opposite his first speech.

This MS. and MS. xix., which formed its cover, were included in the sale-catalogue of the library of James Boswell in 1825, but were claimed by the College authorities and given up to them a few days before the sale.

THEOLOGICAL TRACTS and other pieces in prose and verse, in different hands of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries :—

1. SERMONS for festivals, from Advent to Quadragesima, in Latin. The first sermon, on Isaiah xxxv. 4, begins, ‘Ante adventum domini, fratres karissimi, tanta caligine genus hominum uoluebatur.’ This and the sermon ‘in die S. Stephani’ are included in a volume of sermons of St. Bernard in Brit. Mus. Burney MS. 301, but they are not printed among his works. f. 1.

2. EXTRACTS from St. Augustine, sermons on the Nativity, St. Peter, St. Benedict, &c., in Latin. ff. 22–23*b*, 24*b*–28.

3. ‘MISSA de sancto Antonio.’ Inserted in a later hand of the fifteenth century. f. 24.

4. EXPLANATION of the two degrees of excommunication, ‘the lesse curse’ and the ‘more curse,’ beginning, ‘It is ordeyned by þe covnsel of alle holy chirche first of our holy fader þe pope of Rome and his cardenallys and his counselle and sythyn be erchebyschoppis and byschoppis and alle þe clergie þat euery man of holy chirche þat hath cure of sowlys schuld schewe among þer paryschonys fouure tymys in þe ȝere partycles þat be wrytyn in þe generalle sentense,’ &c. Imperfect. Inserted by the same hand as art 3. f. 28.

5. ‘INCIPIT liber qui appellatur Lucidarius’: the Elucidarium or Dialogue between a master and pupil on the Christian faith, attributed to Honorius, Bishop of Autun, St. Anselm, and others. f. 29.

6. 'HIC incipit tractatus Caducani Bargornensis [sic, Bangorensis] episcopi de modo confitendi': a treatise on confession, by Cadogan, Bishop of Bangor [1215–1237, ob. 1241], beg. 'Notandum quod vere penitentes possunt agnosciri.' f. 46.

7. SUMMA de officio sacerdotum, beg. 'Qui bene presunt presbiteri, duplici honore dingni [digni] habeantur.' Attributed in New Coll. MS. 94 to Richard [William] de Montibus, Chancellor of Lincoln [ob. 1213], and in Bodley MS. 64 to Richard de Wetherset, Chancellor of Cambridge. W. de Montibus is twice mentioned by name in the body of the work. f. 49.

8. THEOLOGICAL COMMONPLACES and miscellaneous notes, including a series of proverbs in verse, as, e.g., 'Cum sis mendicus, tibi vix erit unus amicus.' A few English sentences also occur, as (f. 76b), 'If yt so were þat þe ape penyes bere, yet ssolden men seyn in þe gate, wolcome syre ape.' ff. 74–79.

9. POEM on the Life of Christ, in English: a fragment, containing the first 519 lines. Written, about 1300, on part of a quire (the two outside leaves of which are lost) originally forming part of another MS. The first three pages remaining (ff. 80–81) contain the end of some theological treatise, notes on the plagues of Egypt, &c., in Latin. f. 81b.

The poem begins :—

'Sum wyle i was wþt sinne ibunde
 Ant sinne me hauid cast to grunde
 Bot swete ihesu þine fif wundis?
 Lesid me hauis of harde stundis.
 Se hu i to þe wende mi pouht.
 Pymis to þole greuis me nouht.
 þi ded me hauis of serue al brought.
 Ant loue to þe in me hauis vrouht.'

10. POEM on the Miracles of the Virgin, in French: a fragment of about 800 lines, containing part of the stories of Theophilus and his compact with the Devil, and of a monk in Germany, ‘ki pur mal guerpir prist puisun.’ The hand, though of about the same date, differs from that of art. 9, and the edges of the leaves have been cut, mutilating the text. f. 85.

The same versions are in Brit. Mus., Egerton MS. 612, ff. 27b, 41, translated by Adgar al. William from a book written by ‘Mestre Albri’ in the library of St. Paul’s, London. The connecting lines here (f. 88b) are addressed to a ‘dame Mahaut’:

‘E gente e bone gent senee
 Ki en dev estes asemblee
 E uus dame mahaut premeeres
 A uus dirrai plus uolantiers
 Des miracles des granz succurs
 E [sic, ke] fait nostre dame a plusurs

Written in the fourteenth century. With the inscriptions, ‘Iste liber datus est comuni armariolo per dominum Reginaldum de Barneby. Quicunque illum alienauerit anathema sit,’

f. 26b; and, 'De communi librario monachorum Dunelmensium,' f. 27.

Vellum, ff. 263. Octavo.

MS. No. XXIV.

'MANUEL de Pecche': Robert [Mannyngham] of Brunne's Handlyng Synne, a poem founded on the Manuel des Péchés of William of Wadinton.

A fragment, ending at the ninth commandment with the story of Jephtha, being lines 1-2897 of the edition printed for the Roxburghe Club, ed. F. J. Furnivall, 1862. A few lines at the bottom of the first leaf are also torn away. The variations from the printed text are numerous. Written in a rough, ill-formed hand in the early part of the fifteenth century, by a scribe surnamed Rose (f. 16). The lines containing the author's name run as follows:—

'[To alle crystyn men vndir sunne,
And to gode men of Brunne,]<sup>1</sup>
And specyally alle be name.

<sup>3</sup> John de Camelton appears as prior of Sempringham in 1298 (Brit. Mus., Add. Chart. 20652). He cannot therefore, as Sir F. Madden assumed (ed. Furnivall, p. v.), be identical with John de Hamertone, who held office from 1276 until the end of March, 1282. According to Willis (Mitred Abbeys, 1719, vol. ii. p. 121) Hamertone was succeeded by Roger de Bolingbrok, who died in

HOURS of the Virgin, &c., containing a calendar, f. 1; 'quindecim oraciones,' f. 14; commemorations of saints, &c., f. 25; 'hore beate Marie virginis secundum vsum sarrum' [Sarum], f. 45; lauds of the Virgin: 'has videas laudes qui sacra virgine gaudes,' f. 110: 'septem gaudia in honore beate Marie virginis,' f. 126; the five wounds, f. 128<sup>b</sup>; 'oracio venerabilis Bede presbiteri de septem verbis Christi in 1298, and was succeeded by Philip de Barton or Burton. These dates, however, are at variance with the language of Robert of Brunne. If he is to be depended upon, Bolingbrok probably died in 1288, not 1298, and Barton did not become prior until 1303, the same year in which the poem was begun. This would exactly allow the requisite ten years for John de Camelton, 1288-1298, and five for John Clattone, 1298-1303. For the last name both Mr. Furnivall's MSS. read Clyntone. It has been suggested that John de Glyndone, who was prior from 1332 to 1341, is intended; but his date is obviously too late.

MS. No. XXVII.

'ESCHINES answer to Demosthenes': a translation of the speech of Æschines περὶ τῆς παραπρεσβείας; 1583.

Preceded by a dedicatory letter in the hand of, and signed by, John Osborne, addressed to Sir Christopher Hatton, Vice-Chamberlain to the Queen and Captain of the Guard, and dated London, 26 Jan., 1582[3]. The writer speaks of an earlier work favourably received by Sir C. Hatton, and adds, 'I meane farther also to translate you two other most excellent workes. Eschines and Demosthenes orations about the coronation of Demosthenes is the one; and the whole volume of Demosthenes orations of state and counsayle is the other.' A translation by him of the speech of Demosthenes against Leptines is in Brit. Mus., Add. MS. 10059. This also was the original presentation copy, and is dated London, 10 Jan., 1581[2].

The translator was probably John Osborne, afterwards Sir

John Osborne, of Chicksand, knt., son of Peter Osborne, Treasurer's Remembrancer of the Exchequer, who married a niece of Sir John Cheke, the first Regius Professor of Greek at Cambridge. John Osborne succeeded his father as Treasurer's Remembrancer in 1592, and died in 1628, aged 76.

Paper, ff. 51. Small quarto.

'WHETHER a Prince or Soueraine Magistrat may, in cases of High Treason, take the lief of his subiect without triall by the ordinary course of his lawes, as in the case of the late D. of Guise hapned in France. With a brief declaration of the tresons complotted by the house of Guise against the K. and state of France'; 1589 or 1590.

Preceded by a dedicatory letter addressed to Sir Christopher Hatton, K.G., Lord Chancellor [1587-1591], signed by the author, Thomas Wilkes, Clerk of the Privy Council. The question is answered in the affirmative, and the dedication concludes, 'Lastlie, I doo applie and compare the actions of the D. of Guise [Henri de Lorraine, Duc de Guise, assassinated at the Royal Château of Blois, 23 Dec., 1588] and his complices to the examples produced, whereby it may appere that the maner of his death in that kinde was not onelie not vnlawfull but necessarie for the saftie of the King and preservacion of his estate.'

The presentation copy, having the signature 'Chr. Hatton, Canc.', on ff. 1, 50*b*.

Paper, ff. 50. Small quarto.

MS. No. XXIX.

'MILITARY DISCOURSE prouing whether it bee better for England to give an invador present battaile, or to temporize and deferre the same ; with a certaine ready and orderly course for the speedy arming and bringing of men together in the shire of Kent at an alarum giuen to the country, which by like proporcion may bee observed in any other shire whatsoeuer throughout England and Wales' ; circ. 1595.

The writer, who advocates a temporising policy, speaks of another treatise shown by him privately to some of the Lords of the Council in 1585 [ff. 2*b*, 32]. The scope of the earlier work was 'but to perswade you to restrayne the violently and disorderly running downe of the countrie to the sea-side to fight and give battaile to the enemy at landing after the old custome' [f. 28*b*] ; and the arguments there advanced having been 'lately impugned by a gentleman of good worth and his discourse committed to print,' he was compelled to uphold and fortify them. He appears to have been a soldier by profession, and had served in France at the siege of Paris and elsewhere, no doubt in the English force under Lord Willoughby sent to the aid of Henry of Navarre in Sept., 1589. Neither of these leaders, however, is mentioned, but the Duke of Parma is continually eulogised, especially for 'the late carriage of his warres in France.'

The writer also refers to the defeat of the Spanish Armada [f. 22], and gives a graphic account as an eye-witness [f. 17] of the tumultuous way in which, upon the firing of the beacons, the country-people rushed down to the shore, 'some with clubbs, some with piked staves and pitchforkes, all vnarmed, and they that were best appointed were but with a bill, a bow and a sheafe of arrowes, noe captaine or commander appointed to direct, lead or order them,' &c.

Several copies of the discourse are in the British Museum, one of which, Harley MS. 4685, is in the same hand as the present MS.

Paper, ff. 36. Folio.

MS. No. XXX.

'BREEF TABLES of vsuall English waightes and measurs, wherin doeth appeare what proporcion they beare one to another in their kyndes, with certain termes and sizes of waight, measur and number belonging properly to som thinges, and a short table of partes of tyme, not vnfitt for eny man that dealith with accomptes of all sortes'; circ. 1600.

Among the special tables are the measure of salmon and eels, the number and measure of herrings, the 'number only' of other fish, furs, skins, tanned leather, &c., and the sizes of broad-cloth, narrow-cloth, 'carsies,' cottons, 'frizes and rugges' and flannel, according to the custom of the several places of manufacture.

Paper, ff. 23. Quarto.

MS. No. XXXI.

'TOM TELL TROTH: or a free discourse touching the murmurs of the tyme. Directed to his Majestie by way of humble aduertisement.'

An anonymous political pamphlet, written about the end of the year 1621. See Calendar of State Papers, 1619-1623, p. 332.

The writer concludes, 'I shalbe content to remayne vñknowne, soe as I may make your Majestie knowe what false and wicked men keepe from yow, the misfortunes of gouernment and the iust complaints of your subiectes,' &c.

A copy dated 1621 is in Harley MS. 1220, f. 63. Published in black-letter, without date, quarto, fifteen leaves. Another edition appeared in 1642.

Paper, ff. 84. Small quarto.

First printed, London, 1630, 4to. Included in Kennet's Complete History of England, 1706, vol. ii. p. 273.

A contemporary copy, written in two hands, neither of which is the author's autograph.

Paper, ff. 84. Folio.

MS. No. XXXIII.

'LES TENURES de Monsieur Littleton': the printed edition, London, 1612, 12mo, interleaved and annotated later in the seventeenth century.

Paper, ff. 195. Quarto.

MS. No. XXXIV.

NOTES of sermons on the two covenants, the mediation of Christ, &c. ; having the date July, 1649, on f. 2, and the name 'Mr. [John?] Strickland' and 'Mr. [Richard?] Byfeild, June 9, 1650,' on ff. 38, 121b.

Paper, ff. 134. Duodecimo.

MS. No. XXXV.

CONTEMPORARY COPIES of three letters 'concerning the lawfullness of taking the oaths to K. William and Q. Mary,' addressed to Captain Hatton, the first [ff. 1-4] and third [ff. 9-52] by J. A., and the second [ff. 5-8] by the Rev. Henry Dodwell, Camden Professor of History at Oxford; 1589.

The last letter of J. A., who advocates submission against Dodwell, concludes, 'I could add many other arguments (of great weight with me) to prove our discharge from the former oath and our liberty to take the new one, but I may well think that they would be tedious and offensive to you who have seen and considered most things that can be offer'd on this side and have probably determined against them in your own judgement ; what I have said, I take to be a full answer to M<sup>r</sup> D's. charge of apostasie and perjury,' &c. The initials J. A. possibly mean John Allen, Archdeacon of Chester, 1686-1695 (see above, p. 155). Capt. Hatton is no doubt Capt. Charles Hatton, younger son of the first Lord Hatton. From an entry in Luttrell's Diary, 22 June, 1690, it appears that he was sent to the Tower 'for handing to the presse a treasonable paper against the government.' See also the Hatton Correspondence, Camden Soc., 1878, vol. ii. pp. 151 seqq.

At the end, f. 53, is an original letter on the same subject, without signature or address, dated Highgate, 22 Aug., 1689.

Paper, ff. 53. Small quarto.

MS. No. XXXVI.

'THE six Satires of A. Persius Flaccus grammatically translated by J. R.' [John Rhodes, usher and school-master Fellow of Dulwich College, 1692-1701 ?].

At the end, reversing the volume, is a 'compendium' of Greek grammar, in a later hand of the eighteenth century, ff. 43-58.

Paper, ff. 58. Small octavo.
